JUDGMENT RESERVED

(BEFORE THE PRESIDENT OF THE HIGH COURT, MR. JUSTICE HANNA AND MR. JUSTICE O'BYRNE.)

Judgment was reserved in the appeal which came before the Court by way of case stated of the Pharmaceutical Society of Ireland against assessments to income tax made on the Society in respect of profits from trade, schools, examinations, interest from investments and profits from premises.

Mr. Costello, K.C., and Mr. Matheson (instructed by Messrs. Monks and Gaynor) appeared for the Pharmaceutical Society; and Mr. McCann, K.C., and Mr. Geraghty (instructed by Mr. B. Collins, Revenue Solicitor) for the Special Commissioners of Income Tax.

Continuing his reply on behalf of the appellants, Mr. J. A. Costello said that there was nothing in the statute under which the Society was established to show that the legislature had any intention to benefit any of the members of the Society. There was no power to restrict the number entering the professions; on the contrary, there was a statutory duty to accept every candidate who applied for examination.

REMOVED FROM TRUSTEESHIP

DUBLIN MAN WHO DISAPPEARED

ESTATE ACCOUNT TO BE PREPARED

(BEFORE MR. JUSTICE JOHNSTON.)

ORDERS were granted, removing Jonathan Patrick Saul, Upper Leeson street, Dublin, from his trusteeship under the will and codicils of his father, Thomas Saul, late of Mount Eden road, Donnybrook, Dublin, who died on 12th July, 1930, and directing an account of such profits and income of the late Mr. Saul's real and personal estate as may have been received by Jonathan P. Saul, as agent, subject to trusts, since his father's death.

The orders were made on a motion for judgment, in default of appearance by the defendant, on behalf of his mother, Mrs. Katherine Saul, widow, Sandycove Promenade, Dun Laoghaire, as a beneficiary under the will and codicils, and John T. Saul, Addiscombe road, Croydon, Surrey, a brother of defendant, and Richard W. MacNeice, solicitor, Dublin, co-trustees of Jonathan P. Saul, who are plaintiffs in an action against the latter in respect of the trusts.

Mr. Price, K.C., who, with Mr. Maurice C. Walker (instructed by Messrs. R. W. MacNeice and Son), appeared for the plaintiffs, said that Mr. Thomas Saul's estate consisted almost entirely of house property and amounted to over £14,000. Some of the houses had good rentals. The defendant had acted as agent for the property, and, under agreement, he continued as agent while acting as trustee. His mother was tenant for life of the residuary estate, the gross rents and profits from which amounted to about £1,300 per year. The last cash payment made by the defendant on foot of the income of the trust estate was in July, 1936, and, notwithstanding repeated requests by his co-trustees, he had failed to pay the sums due to Mrs. Saul or to furnish particulars of the rentals received by him on trust.

"He has disappeared," continued Mr. Price, "and we cannot find out his address. We cannot get either money or account."

In an action by John T. Saul against the same defendant, Mr. Justice Johnston made an order for an account of money received and rents collected by the defendant as agent for the plaintiff in respect of property in Upper Leeson street and Annesley Park, Rathmines.

The matter came before the Court on a motion for judgment in default of appearance by the defendant.

Mr. Walker (instructed by Messrs. R. W. MacNeice and Son) appeared for the plaintiff.

There was no appearance for the defendant.

BANK APPEAL ALLOWED

GUARANTEE TO A SOCIETY

(BEFORE THE PRESIDENT OF THE HIGH COURT AND MR. JUSTICE HANNA.)

The National Bank, Ltd., appealed from a judgment of Circuit Court Judge Sealy giving Patrick Sheehan, Bawnavanogue Cappagh, Co. Waterford, a decree against them for £113 18s. 8d. and dismissing their counterclaim and set off against him on foot of a guarantee for £3,000 which he, with 141 others, had, it was stated, signed in favour of the Blackwater Valley Co-operative Society, Ltd.

Patrick Sheehan had sued the bank for the amount claimed, alleging that it was due on foot of a deposit receipt, with interest. The bank in their defence pleaded a counterclaim and set off based upon the guarantee, and it was mentioned to the Judge that the bank had issued a summary summons on foot of the guarantee against Sheehan and the other guarantors in the High Court. In these circumstances the Circuit Judge refused to hear the counter-claim and set off and dismissed it, and gave judgment for the plaintiff for the amount claimed on the deposit account, with interest.

Against this decision the bank now appealed, on the ground that a defence by way of a set off was a statutory defence, and that there was no jurisdiction in the Court to exclude a defence by reason of a set off.

Mr. Vaughan Wilson (instructed by Mr. J. F. Williams) appeared for the National Bank, Ltd.; and Mr. Brereton Barry, K.C., and Mr. Budd (instructed by Mr. Arthur Ryan) for Patrick Sheehan.

The Court allowed the appeal and remitted the action to the Circuit Court Judge, with directions to hear evidence on the set off. The appellant was allowed the costs of the appeal, the costs of the hearing in the court below to abide the result.

ADMINISTRATION BY COURT

KILKENNY APPLICATION GRANTED

(BEFORE MR. JUSTICE JOHNSTON.)

Mr. Bacon (instructed by Mr. Thomas G. Lanigan) applied on behalf of Reginald J. Nolan, Kilkenny, administrator of James J. Corish, who died, a bachelor and intestate, in a Dublin hotel, in 1932, to have the personal estate of Mr. Corish administered under the direction of the court.

Mr. Nolan had, said Mr. Bacon, acted as agent for Mr. Corish for many years, in the collection of rents of some freehold and leasehold property in Kilkenny, in which Mr. Corish had an interest. In a recent action in the High Court, it was decided that the interest of Mr. Corish in this property was only a life interest, and enquiries had to be made to ascertain his heir-at-law. In the course of those enquiries, it was found that the next-of-kin would be no nearer than third cousins, and that probably there would be a large number of them.

It was also found that Mr. Corish had a substantial amount of personal property, both in the Irish Free State and in England, and, in the circumstances, the administrator was advised that he should apply to the court to have the next-of-kin ascertained, and the estate administered under the order of the court.

Mr. Justice Johnston granted the application.

CENTRAL CRIMINAL COURT.

PRISONER FOUND TO BE INSANE

MAYO INFANTICIDE CHARGE

(BEFORE MR. JUSTICE GAVAN DUFFY.)

In the case of Mary Gertrude Faherty, of Cong, Co. Mayo, the jury found that she was insane and incapable of pleading to the indictment, in which she was charged with infanticide, and she was ordered to be detained during the pleasure of the Executive Council.

Dr. Henry Redmond gave evidence regarding the mental state of the prisoner, who, he said, he had under observation in Mountjoy prison since 6th July.

Mr. William Black, K.C., and Mr. R. McLaughlin (instructed by the Chief State Solicitor) appeared for the State.

TIPPERARY MURDER CHARGE

ARMED MAN IN BEDROOM

FARMER AND WIFE SHOT

TRIAL OPENED IN DUBLIN COURT

JOHN HOGAN, Donaskeigh, Co. Tipperary, pleaded not guilty to the murder of William Hanley, a farmer, also of Donaskeigh, on 12th August.

Mr. Martin Maguire, K.C., and Mr. Kevin Haugh (instructed by the Chief State Solicitor) prosecuted; Mr. Kingsmill Moore, K.C., and Mr. J. J. Walsh (instructed by Messrs. J. F. D'Arcy and Co., Tipperary) appeared for the defence.

Opening the case, Mr. Maguire said that William Hanley lived about five miles from Tipperary Town, in a comfortable farm, with his wife, a son and two daughters. In the same townland, on an adjoining farm, about three-quarters of a mile away, lived the accused man and his family—his father, an elderly man, who had died since this tragic occurrence, a younger brother and two sisters. There had been bad blood between these two families; there was a history of litigation over fences, and for some years the two families had not been on speaking terms. Right down to the events of 12th August this ill-feeling existed.

On the morning of 12th August, about 3.30 o'clock, old time, the Hanley family were in bed, when they were awakened and a blow was struck at the father with a bludgeon of some sort. The intruder in the bedroom had entered apparently by the window. A shot was fired at William Hanley at close range, inflicting a dreadful wound. The family now were aroused. One of the girls rushed into the room and grappled with the intruder. Another shot was fired during this struggle.

"RAN IN TERROR"

The son also had rushed in, and this second shot narrowly missed injuring another member of the family. The intruder ran into the kitchen and fired a third shot.

"He goes out through the front door, or is bundled out, and the door is closed against him," said counsel. "Some of the family, the boy and the younger girl, have run in terror for their lives. The intruder goes back to the bedroom window. The two old people are in bed, the father injured. There the intruder fires another shot in the direction of the bed where they are. It shoots away part of the hand of Mrs. Hanley, and pellets lodge in the body of William Hanley."

The intruder was recognised by his voice by members of the family. A priest and a doctor were summoned, and William Hanley was taken to a nursing home in Tipperary, where he died on the morning of the 14th August. The police arrived on the scene about 5.15 on the morning of the shooting. Sergeant Kelly went to the home of Hogan. He found a window open and the accused man in bed. He entered through the window and put a pair of handcuffs on the accused man. He found a single-barrelled gun in the kitchen and a pull-through near the bed. There was a thread adhering to the foresight of the gun.

THREAD ON GUN

Counsel went on to explain maps, plans and photographs in connection with the trial, and pointed out where three cartridge cases had been found. He stated that the piece of thread adhering to the foresight of the gun had been found to be identical with the thread in the pull-through. The fourth cartridge case was not found in the neighbourhood of the house. As a result of microscopic examination a firearms expert would be able to say that the cartridges found in William Hanley's house were fired by the gun found in the accused man's house. An iron bar and a piece of canvas were discovered by the Guards in William Hanley's bedroom; a similar piece of iron and a similar piece of canvas were found in an outhouse of Hogan's. Evidence would be given regarding a footprint, and the finding of wet boots, wet trousers and wet dungarees at Hogan's house. It was a dry night, but there was a heavy dew.

Before he died William Hanley made a deposition in the presence of the accused man. The accused man had been identified by his voice as the person who fired the shot, as the person who was in the room that night, and it could not be contended for a moment that there was not every opportunity of identifying his voice, for he shouted on several occasions. The gun in the case belonged to Hogan's father, but the accused man had been cautioned against using it by the Civic Guard sergeant a few weeks before the murder.

Referring again to the litigation between the Hogan and Hanley families, counsel said that the last occasion was a trespass by the accused man with a gun upon the Hanley's land. The accused man had the opportunity, the motive and the means for committing this crime.

Mr. Maguire's opening address occupied approximately an hour and a half.

Evidence was given in regard to the maps, models and photographs produced.

WIDOW'S EVIDENCE

Mrs. Annie Hanley, widow of William Hanley, said that a son and two daughters lived with her and her husband at Donaskeigh. About 3.30 o'clock in the morning of 12th August she was awakened by the noise of a table rattling, and saw a boy in the room. The window had been open when she and her husband went to bed. The boy fired a shot in the direction of the bed. She jumped out of bed. Her son and a daughter ran into the room. A second shot was fired. Her husband had been injured by the first shot. He got out of bed, grasped at the gun, but had to go back to bed again. The second shot had been intended for her son.

The boy fired another shot in the kitchen. She heard him say, "Hands up," after firing the first shot. A fourth shot was fired from the window towards the bed, and lodged in her hand. (Witness showed her bandaged hand.) Part of the shot also struck her husband. She saw the boy at the gate. He was wearing a mask. An iron bar with canvas round it was left on the table in the bedroom by the intruder. At noon that day her husband and she were taken in the ambulance to a nursing home in Tipperary. Her husband died on the 14th of August.

Mr. Maguire—Can you say who was in the room that night?—Yes. Hogan.

Which Hogan?—Johnny Hogan.

DAYLIGHT BREAKING

To Mr. Kingsmill Moore—She heard a clock strike four o'clock, old time. The whole of this assault was finished between 3.30 and 4 o'clock. Daylight was breaking at the time, but it was too dark to see in the room. She was prepared to identify the masked and overcoated man who was in the room by his appearance. She identified him by the light of his flash-lamp. He was talking in the bedroom, in the kitchen and outside the house. She could not say what he was saying.

Was there any meaning to what he was saying?—I think not.

Was he giggling?—Yes.

When the man left the house, said witness in further cross-examination, he did not seem in any hurry. He might have stood by the gate for a minute. It would be incorrect to state that her husband went down to the kitchen after the first shot was fired. He got as far as the door, but she did not think he got into the kitchen.

To Mr. Maguire—Her family had not been on speaking terms with the Hogans for about five years.

To Mr. Moore—Her husband, about four years ago, took an action against the Hogans about a fence. The Hogans won the action.

The Court adjourned until 10.30 o'clock this morning.

DUBLIN DISTRICT COURT

ARSON ATTEMPT ALLEGED

PACKING CASES ON QUAYSIDE

(BEFORE MR. HANNAN.)

Francis Patrick Clery, aged 36, a coachbuilder, of Home Farm road, Dublin, was charged with attempted arson and intimidation at Sir John Rogerson's quay on Monday last.

The charges were that he wilfully and maliciously tried to set fire to a wooden packing-case containing motor parts, the property of McCairns Motors, Ltd., Alexandra road, Dublin, at Sir John Rogerson's quay between 5 and 6 o'clock on Monday afternoon; and that he injured the property of McCairns Motors, Ltd., with a view to prevent the firm from performing their legal rights.

Mr. J. A. Geary prosecuted on behalf of the Chief State Solicitor, and Mr. P. Campbell, solicitor, defended.

Inspector Murphy said that he saw the accused man standing near a wooden packing-case, on the top of which there was a quantity of petrol, and there was a petrol tin on the ground beside the case. When questioned about the petrol tin, the accused man told the Inspector: "I would rather not do any talking here. You know that there is a strike on and all that sort of thing."

Detective-Officer Forde, who gave evidence of having brought the defendant to the College Police Station, said that later in the evening he was released on bail, supplied by Mr. O'Hanlon, secretary of the National Union of Vehicle Builders.

Harbour-Constable James Daly said that when patrolling the river on Monday evening he saw the defendant pour the contents of a tin on to one of the cases which were lying on Sir John Rogerson's quay. He could smell petrol at the time. When asked what he was doing, the defendant said that he was disposing of a tin of petrol which he did not want.

The accused man was remanded on bail until 25th October.

After an all-day debate the House of Keys yesterday carried the second reading of the Manx Divorce Bill, which is a copy of Mr. A. P. Herbert's measure by 13 votes to 6. The bill, introduced by Mr. W. C. Craine (Labour) was bitterly opposed by several members, chiefly on religious grounds. It was supported vigorously by the only woman member of the House.

A PROBLEM OF INDUSTRY

PSYCHOTHERAPISTS ARE TOO FEW

Serious shortage in the number of doctors able to treat "nervous" cases at British industrial centres will be considered by leading business men at a sherry party and meeting, to be held in London on 27th October, at the headquarters of the British Medical Association. The Duke of Kent will preside.

Lord Howlenden will describe the present position. Outside London there are not enough specially trained doctors to provide one psychotherapist per town. Workpeople suffering from neurosis have to remain untreated or are obliged to travel to London for attention.

A scheme to train an adequate number of doctors in this branch of medical science will be discussed, and a proposal that industry should contribute towards the cost, will be considered. The scheme involves the erection of larger premises for the medical school and other departments of the Tavistock Clinic.

A site has been obtained in Bloomsbury, near the University of London, and the financial requirements are in the neighbourhood of £300,000 for the structure, plus an assured annual income of £20,000 for maintenance.

The Tavistock Clinic was the pioneer organisation to combat the growing prevalence of neurosis among the working classes of England. It has been training doctors regularly, but the length of the course and the restrictions of the existing premises allow only a dozen psychotherapists to be "turned out" annually. This represents a mere fraction of the number required to meet the needs of the industrial population.

BRITAIN'S NEW RECORD

The demand for electricity continues to grow. For the first nine months of this year over sixteen thousand million units have been generated by authorised electrical undertakings, an increase of nearly two thousand million units over the same period last year.

THE NINE-POWER CONFERENCE

AMERICA'S PROVISO

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

HYDE PARK (NEW YORK), Tuesday.

President Roosevelt issued a statement to-night that America would enter the Nine-Power Conference, to be held at Brussels at the end of the month, "without commitments on the part of this country to other Governments."

The statement, which was issued after a long conference with Mr. Norman Davies, United States delegate to the conference, is generally regarded as a reply to the assertions of Senator Johnson at San Francisco to-day.

"We know perfectly well that Mr. Davies would not be going to Brussels unless in advance a programme had been agreed upon between England and this country," declared Senator Johnson, in a statement criticising Roosevelt's policy.

A SILENCE ROOM

WHAT EVERY HOUSE SHOULD HAVE

Every woman should see that her house has a silence room. This is the opinion put forward by Mr. F. R. Yerbury, Hon. A.R.I.B.A., speaking at the Sixth Business Hour Luncheon of the London branch of the Electrical Association for Women.

Mr. Yerbury, who has been studying domestic architecture in several European countries and America, stressed that in these days it was impossible to get away from the continual noise, and that one completely silent room in the house or flat was essential.

Further points which went to make up the home he thought every woman should have were:—

The touch of humanity which makes a dwelling place a home.

Architectural plans built around the people for whom the home was intended, and not the people put into the plans.

Silence room, which is easily obtainable in these days of sound insulated material.

Heating system which properly heats the bedrooms as well as the lounge.

Air of quality, which can never be obtained if fashion for fashion's sake alone is followed.

Ample storage room for things not in use at the moment, but not too many cupboards, because they always get cluttered up.

A spare bedroom which is always in readiness for guests, and not used as additional storage space.

Well equipped kitchen, with as many electrical labour-saving devices as possible.

MEDICAL UNION PROTEST

ARMY PENSIONS BILL

PROPOSED REGULATIONS RESENTED

"UNJUST and inequitable" is the description given by the Irish Free State Medical Union to the pensions proposed to be given to Army medical officers under the Army Pensions Act, which is to come before the Dail shortly.

Yesterday the Union issued a statement dealing exhaustively with the subject. It points out that the regulations under the Act provide for two schemes for calculating the retirement pay of medical officers. The first is a "rank and service" basis scheme giving a twenty per cent. addition over corresponding combatant officers' rates with fixed maximums, and the second provides for a basis of one-sixtieth of annual pay for each year of service, with a maximum of forty-sixtieths, or two-thirds.

A table included in the statement shows that a captain in the combatant ranks with £328 a year pay will be entitled to a pension of £230 a year, while a medical officer with the rank of captain, whose pay amounts to £730, will receive only £276 as pension. A commandant in the combatant ranks receiving £438 a year will get a pension of £290, while a medical officer with the same rank earning £857 a year will receive a pension of £340. A major receiving £511 a year will get a pension of £340, while a medical officer with this rank getting £1,100 a year will receive a pension of £408. A medical officer cannot arrive at the rank of colonel or a general. There are, however, five grades of medical captains receiving salaries of from £474 to £730, yet they would receive virtually the same pensions under the scheme.

UNFAIRNESS ALLEGED

Combatant officers who were drawing far lower rates of pay would get higher pensions in relation to pay, not that the pensions for combatant officers are exorbitant. They were far from it, but the unfairness arose from the fact that, while the pension of the combatant officer bore a just and proportional representation to his pay, no attempt had been made to equate the medical officer's pension in that direction. The very circumstances that made the scheme a favourable one for the many combatant officers who held high ranks, or for others who eventually would achieve them, rendered the scheme a sterile one for a service for whom those ranks did not exist.

The highest rank in the medical service was that of Major (it had been reduced from Lieutenant-General, Major-General and Lieutenant-Colonel since 1923), and there was no certainty that the low water mark yet had been reached. Therefore, it became impossible to base so vital a matter as pension on so unstable a foundation.

The alternative scheme of one-sixtieth of annual pay for each year of service was one from which advantages could be derived only in circumstances which did not exist in the Army Medical Service. Its successful application pre-supposed an early age of entry, say 16 to 18 years. Under modern regulations doctors only left hospital at 26 or 27 years of age. As the average age of entry to the present Medical Service was about 30 years, they took service with an initial disadvantage of several years.

STATIC CONDITIONS

The scheme also pre-supposed advancement in pay and position with years of service and two-thirds of pay on retirement. In the Medical Service conditions had been static for nearly fifteen years, and no officers could reasonably expect to be pensioned in any higher rank or position than he possessed now, or had possessed for many years. So that when pensions came to be calculated his initial pay was not likely to vary much from his terminal pay. Another fact in determining the successful application of this scheme was the right to serve on to the age of 65 years. The regulations contained no guarantee that this essential feature would be allowed to medical officers, and, therefore, they could not envisage any prospect other than retirement at 50 or 55, by which time only a small fraction of their pay would be available as pension.

The statement goes on to suggest how these difficulties might be overcome. A possible expedient, it states, would be the introduction into the scheme of the precedent of the 1924 Act—namely, the grading of medical officers three ranks higher up for purposes of pension. A pension scheme analogous to that enjoyed by officers of the mental hospital service offered a ready solution. In this service varying conditions of pay, position, length of service and allowances were dealt with quite easily and equitably on a basis of one-fiftieth of pay and allowances for each year of service. The larger fraction of one-fiftieth and the inclusion of allowances as pensionable made this a favourable basis as compared with one-sixtieth of pay alone.

NOT CONSIDERED ATTRACTIVE

No service which contained the possibility of foreshortening the doctor's career at the early age of 50 and 55 could be considered attractive, and the Union suggested that the authorities should provide gratuities in addition to pensions, on the basis of two months' pay and allowances for each year of service to a maximum of three years' pay and allowances after eighteen years' service.

The statement also suggests that an officer should be free to leave the service, except in a state of war, without the consent of the Minister. As the scheme stood medical officers on retirement could not live without resuming employment to supplement their position. As there would be little future in the Free State for the retired medical officer, practice in Great Britain would be his sole resort. In this case it would be important to ensure that the consent to live away while drawing retirement pay would not be withheld.

The Union also suggests that officers compulsorily retired after fifteen years' service for reasons other than misconduct or ill-health may have five years' service added, and so retire at the twenty years' rate.

The lack of promotion had been a serious drawback in the service. It was anticipated that favourable provision might be made to effect this in the pensions regulations, and that officers ought to retire on pension in a higher rank to compensate them for long service in the lower rank, especially where absence of vacancies in the establishment necessitated this long service. Such had been the practice in other armies. Actually the proposed regulations legislate in the other direction, so that even if officers after fifteen years now received a belated promotion they would have to serve five further years in the higher rank before qualifying for the pension accompanying the rank.

No allowance was made in respect of additional pay to the non-commissioned officers and men of the Army Medical Corps as the result of passing examinations.

It was learnt at the Union's offices yesterday that the Union is not anxious to jeopardise the position of the combatant officers by pressing for the withdrawal of the regulations. They hope that the schemes relating to medical officers will be amended in the near future.

NORTH DUBLIN WATER SUPPLY

WELLS NEVER SO LOW

T.D. AND ARISTOCRATS' POMERANIANS

"I NEVER remember the water in North County Dublin wells being so low as it is at the moment."

This statement was made by the County Dublin Health Board's engineer (Mr. F. P. Russell) during a discussion on the Malahide water supply at a meeting of the Board in Dublin yesterday. Mr. Russell, in a report, had advised the Board not to proceed with the Seamount water supply at Malahide until there was an ample supply for the town.

On Monday night Malahide ratepayers, at a meeting, unanimously called for a sworn inquiry to investigate the "deficiency of the local water supply." At the meeting Mr. G. L. McGowan, Labour T.D., promised to ask a question in the Dail about the matter.

"POMS" AND MOTORS

Yesterday, at the Board meeting, Mr. P. J. Fogarty, Fianna Fail T.D. for County Dublin, castigated some of the residents who had attended the protest meeting.

"In 'Castle terrace,' Malahide," he said, "there are a lot of old ladies and bachelors with garages and motor cars. The old ladies wash their pomeranians every day with drinking water, and the bachelors wash their motor cars. It is the aristocratic quarter of Malahide, and they should be asked not to waste the water there."

Agreeing with Mr. Fogarty, Mr. Russell said that it was not easy to prevent people washing their motor cars.

Mr. P. Belton—We should have control, even to the extent of prohibiting them washing their garages and their motor cars. People should make sacrifices and not bath during a water shortage.

Mr. J. T. Ennis (Chairman)—I would not like that statement to come from the Board of Health.

Mr. Belton—After deliberation, and with full responsibility, I adhere to that statement.

Continuing, Mr. Belton said that if the people were to have sufficient water for culinary purposes they should not be allowed to use the water for washing their motor cars.

"If necessary," he added, "I would make it a crime to waste water during a shortage."

Mr. Russell said that a warning notice was being inserted in the newspapers.

Mr. W. Rollins asked what was going to happen if there was not a drop of water. In Dun Laoghaire the water was shut off every night at 10 p.m., and he suggested that this should be done also in the case of Malahide. There was a man continuously on duty in Dun Laoghaire to turn on the supply again in case of fire.

MEDICAL OFFICER'S ADVICE

The County Medical Officer of Health (Dr. J. A. Harbison) said that it was important for the public to realise that the supply of water was primarily for drinking purposes. They had taken a great deal of trouble to ensure that the water was fit for drinking and the public should co-operate in a time of shortage.

Mr. Rollins asked what was the use of people demanding a sworn inquiry when the Board had no water to give them. He did not ever remember the water going so low in the history of North County Dublin.

The Engineer—I never remember the water in the wells so low.

When Mr. Rollins repeated that nobody should be allowed to wash a motor car, the Engineer said that the local water inspector was on duty from twelve to fourteen hours a day and could not be expected to go round looking for people washing cars.

Mr. P. Belton then proposed that between the meetings of the Board full authority should be vested in the Engineer, Secretary and the Medical Officer of Health to take whatever steps and to make whatever orders they thought necessary.

Mr. Rollins seconded the resolution, which was carried unanimously.

LONDON MOTOR SHOW

VISITORS FROM FREE STATE

The Motor Show, which opened at Earl's Court, London, last Thursday, shows the progress which has been made in the last twelve months by car manufacturers throughout the world in efficiency of travel, safety and comfort, and it has been noted with satisfaction that the British industry, though so conservative in many ways, is meeting the requirements of to-day, while, at the same time, no better value, taking intrinsic as well as face value into account, exists than that represented by the latest British productions.

Motoring conditions change more frequently than they did some years ago, and, consequently, ever fresh demands are being made upon the car designer and manufacturer. In the knowledge of this, motor traders have come from all over the world to inspect the latest designs and inventions. Among the Free State visitors who were present at the Show yesterday were:—Messrs. H. E. Bell, William C. Ashenhurst, G. V. B. Cooke, D. Yule, D. L. Babington, A. F. Buckley, T. C. Booth, J. L. O'Hagan, Frank Cavey, J. L. Fox, R. C. Flanagan, S. H. Dring, J. L. Creighton, F. Hill, Percy Huet, W. J. Henderson, C. H. Manders, T. McCairns, F. Gorman, Superintendent O'Neill, S. T. Robinson, S. Cooper, H. Plant, F. M. Summerfield, P. J. Tracy, W. G. Wilkinson, H. P. McEntagart and John O'Neill.

SHOE-SHINES FOR MINERS

Miners of the Doctor Pit, Bedlington, Northumberland, will soon be having their boots cleaned by electricity when they leave the pit. Pithead buildings, containing change-rooms, baths and other facilities, including electric shoe-shining machines, have been erected at a cost of £17,000 by the company owning the colliery. These new comforts will be available from October 23rd.

STRAFFAN HOUSE SALE

GOOD PRICES FOR FRENCH FURNITURE

Keen bidding and good prices marked the second day's sale of the furniture and effects of Straffan House, County Kildare, which is being conducted by Messrs. Jackson Stops and McCabe. The attendance yesterday was much larger than on the opening day. Among the visitors were Lord HolmPatrick, Lady Plunket, Lady Brooke, Sir Basil Goulding and Mrs. Cecil Lavery. There were also present a number of London buyers, as well as prominent buyers from Dublin.

The day was devoted to the disposal of the remaining effects of the diningroom and the furniture and fittings of the drawingroom. The latter were sold in the afternoon and aroused the liveliest interest. Particularly was this the case in regard to the Louis Quinze suite. A beautiful suite, carved in giltwood frames, covered in old Aubusson tapestry, it was the outstanding lot in the sale. It was sold in four lots. The first, containing four elbow chairs and six single chairs, excited lively bidding, and after a keen and tense duel the lot was knocked down to Sir Basil Goulding at 83 guineas. The same buyer also acquired for 24 guineas a 6ft. 10in. settee en suite. Two settees en suite sold at 40 guineas and 32 guineas respectively, the whole Louis Quinze suite bringing 179 guineas. A pair of Louis Quinze elbow chairs, with carved and giltwood frames, covered in crimson damask, brought 16 guineas. A smaller pair fetched 14½ guineas. A beautiful pair of elbow chairs, also Louis Quinze, in watered silk, went for 18 guineas; a pair in silk tapestry brought 17 guineas, and a third pair in figured silk went for 18 guineas. Four single chairs, in figured tapestry, sold for 20 guineas.

A roomy Louis Seize fauteuil in crimson silk damask sold at 20 guineas, and another smaller fauteuil went for 16 guineas. A lovely pair of French Empire stools, with carved and gilt enrichments on painted green ground sold at 16 guineas, and a handsome Louis Seize fender stool, carved and giltwood, went at 14 guineas. A beautiful pair of French Empire vases, with acanthus leaves and vines on square bases, sold at 17 guineas, whilst an artistic pair of French Empire torchière stands, 2ft. 9ins. high, with square tapered legs and claw feet, went to 27 guineas before being knocked down.

BRONZE FIGURES

A most attractive pair of Empire bronze figures, holding six lights, resting on octagonal bases, with chased and applique mounts, brought 20 guineas. A French bronze, "The Dying Gladiator," on marble base, went for 11 guineas, and a French bronze, Mercury, sold at 9 guineas. An Empire timepiece in chased and gilt metal case, surmounted by a figure of Achilles, the whole resting on an oblong Rosso Antico base, and standing 27 inches high, was sold at 16 guineas. A Louis Seize mantel clock by Jacquier, in oblong case of gilt metal, with scroll ends and lapis lazuli panels, surmounted by figures of Apollo and Diana, sold at 7 guineas, and a pair of gilt bronze figures, Cupid and Faun, of the same period, and to match, went for 13 guineas.

There were many beautiful pier mirrors and lofty overmantels in their heavy gilt and carved frames, and these sold well, the prices ranging about 8 guineas.

Good prices also ruled for other furniture. An oblong Chippendale mahogany wine table, with turned gallery, square legs and fret brackets, 2ft. 7ins. by 1ft. 6ins., went for 20 guineas. An English Empire rosewood table, inlaid with brass and ebony bands on lyre support, was an attractive lot at 27 guineas. A pair of Louis Seize marquetry etagerres, with white marble tops and eliptic ends, went for 20 guineas. A walnut marquetry china cabinet brought 16 guineas, and a Louis Seize commode fetched 11 guineas. An antique French walnut slope-front bureau sold at 11 guineas; a six foot settee, with shaped back, upholstered in challi, went at 9 guineas, and another in linen and loose cover brought 11 guineas. Two lounge chairs, with loose cushions and chintz covers, sold at 12 guineas each, and another pair in green casement at 6 and 5 guineas, respectively. A pair of Buhl cabinets went for 26 guineas, and a 4ft. inlaid walnut shaped-top writing table brought 21 guineas.

There were many beautiful old chased and gilt metal scroll wall lights, and there was brisk bidding for all of them, the prices running as high as 9½ guineas. A wrought and chased ormolu chandelier of floral design, with nine "Lily" lights, fitted for electric light, went for 11 guineas. Three pairs of lined cretonne curtains fetched 7½ guineas, and a suite of three pairs of old Aubusson tapestry lambrequins and three carved and giltwood cornices sold at 34 guineas. An antique mahogany china cabinet in the diningroom brought 21 guineas, and a display cabinet of Chinese Chippendale design went for 18½ guineas. Another china cabinet, with Gothic doors and cabriole legs, 7ft. 9ins. by 4ft. 6ins., went for 16 guineas.

A collection of swords, knives, daggers, and other drawingroom ornaments and knick-knacks sold attractively, the bidding being lively and the prices good.

There was also a good sale for the pictures. The best price fetched was 35 guineas for "Winter Carnival," an oil painting attributed to David Teniers, junior. "The Infant Saviour," a picture in oils, went for 10 guineas. A chaste oval pastel of a young lady in blue bodice, by Rosalba, was knocked down at 22 guineas. A portrait in oils of the Duke of Wellington, by Hayter, brought 6 guineas. A very attractive landscape by A. W. Williams sold at 9½ guineas, and an Italian landscape signed "J. N., 1770," went for 9 guineas.

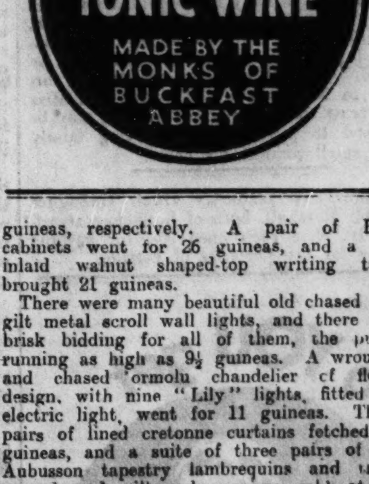

The sale will be resumed to-day at noon.

STRAFFAN HOUSE SALE

The settee of the important Louis Quinze suite, carved and giltwood frames, covered in Old Aubusson Tapestry in floral design, which fetched 179 guineas at yesterday's continuation of the sale of the contents of Straffan House, Straffan, Co. Kildare, by Messrs. Jackson Stops and McCabe.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE

Without Purgatives — and you'll jump out of bed in the morning full of vim and vigour

The liver should pour out two pints of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You get constipated. Your whole system is poisoned and you feel sour, sunk, and the world looks punk.

Laxatives help a little, but a mere bowel movement doesn't get at the cause. It takes those good old Carters Brand Little Liver Pills to get these two pints of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." Harmless, gentle, yet amazing in making bile flow freely. Ask for Carters Brand Little Liver Pills. Stubbornly refuse anything else. 1/3d. and 3/-.

IRISHMAN'S DIARY

Limerick's Art Gallery : Life on a Lightship : The Schooner's Log : Ships in Bottles : An "Invincibles" Ballad

Lightship Life

The young man with the weather-beaten face was in a talkative mood. I overtook him as I tramped the last few miles to Kilmore Quay, that delightful little old-world fishing village in South Wexford, which is famous for its sailors and its lobsters.

The lobsters are caught off the Saltees, and it is catching these crustaceans which gives the boys of Kilmore Quay their first lessons in seamanship. They are seafarers from boyhood, and many of them eventually sail the seven seas.

It was obvious that the young man was a sailor. He told me that he was enjoying a spell of shore leave from one of the lightships which lie off the Wexford coast. He confessed that he was glad to spend a few weeks ashore, though, taking everything into consideration, life on the lightships was anything but monotonous.

A Varied Career

Before he obtained an appointment in the Irish Lights he had a varied career. He first signed on as a "boy" on a local schooner. He subsequently changed to a tramp steamer in the home trade, and when he had sufficient experience he decid to go foreign. He served as an ordinary seaman, an able-bodied seaman, and then, after a period of study at a nautical college, he got his ticket as a third mate.

He considered himself very lucky to get a berth on a lightship. Although it is not a sinecure, the job has many advantages. For example, the holidays are generous, the pay is good, and there is a pension at a comparatively early age.

He told me that the watches are regulated in the same manner as on an ordinary ship. The only difference is that a lightship is always at anchor. However, a man who loves the sea is never bored.

"Anyhow," he continued, "sailors are fond of each other's company, and there is always something to talk about. We have wireless, and we know all that's going on at home and abroad. Our only trouble is that we miss our daily papers, though local fishing boats sometimes come alongside and throw a bundle of newspapers aboard. I tell you we appreciate the kind thought."

Busy Men

"Some people think we have a lazy life. We haven't. As a matter of fact, we are more energetic than those ashore. There is always something to be done aboard ship, and slacking would make things tiresome.

"The man who can make good home-made bread is a popular fellow, and some of us are always trying out recipes we see in the papers for special occasions.

"We are also great readers, and the younger men who haven't tickets as mates or masters study to pass the Department of Industry and Commerce examinations. Navigation is a difficult subject, and a chap who didn't learn much at school has to learn a lot about mathematics and science. Why even the master of a schooner must now enter in his log-book the density of the water in the harbour at the beginning and end of each voyage."

Bottling Ships

"Lightshipmen are very clever with their hands. They love making tiny models of famous sailing ships. These are perfect in every detail. They are placed in bottles. Oval-shaped quart bottles without any advertising matter are used for this purpose. But piloting the ship into the bottle requires great patience. Everything must be shipshape to please a lightshipman, and he would try again and again until he was perfectly satisfied that the ship was moored properly in the bottle.

"Some people think that the bottle is sliced open and afterwards closed with an invisible fixative. No such thing. The craft is actually navigated through the neck of the bottle. The secret of the bottled ship is that the masts, yards, sails and shrouds are folded flat along the deck, and in this position they are placed in the bottle. Then by manipulating various guiding pieces of thread the ship's tackle is raised into the right position. This is where great patience is required, because a slight slip would ruin the work of hours. The bottle is then closed.

"There is a steady demand for these bottled ships as curios. Dealers buy them from us, and hundreds of our little models have been exported to England and America."

When we reached Kilmore he showed me a perfect example of a bottled, fully-rigged three-masted schooner, which was set in a beautifully carved frame ornamented with shamrocks, a round tower, a Celtic cross, a harp, the rising sun, and the words "Homeward Bound."

Limerick's Art Gallery

The Limerick citizens who have been planning to supply their city with an Art Gallery are meeting with more immediate success than they had expected for their project. I am told that many pictures have already been secured, and that the first public exhibition will be held in a few weeks' time. It is hoped that this new Municipal Gallery will become as well known as Dublin's.

The man behind the Limerick scheme is District Justice J. M. Flood, a magistrate also prominent in literary circles. His committee has secured donations or promises of support from such people as Mr. Dermod O'Brien, the Royal Hibernian Academy's President, and Sir John Lavery, who has presented a delightful painting of Maureen O'Sullivan, resting in a Hollywood garden.

Many in Limerick will be most interested in a rare portrait of Catherine Hayes, the singer. This painting has been presented by Mr. C. Curran.

I would not be surprised if the success of the Limerick venture enticed other provincial cities to follow suit. Efforts along that line have already been made in Waterford, where "Loan Exhibitions" of famous paintings have been held from time to time—I believe, as a preliminary to the attempted establishment of a permanent gallery.

"The Invincibles"

The production of Messrs. Hugh Hunt's and Frank O'Connor's play, "The Invincibles," is bringing to light a crop of interesting reminiscences of those days. I have just been furnished with the following stanza from a ballad of the time:—

With daggers and with knives
They cut away their lives,
But who they were we cannot ascertain.
But now we hope and pray
To God each precious day,
That they'll find no Irishman to blame.

I wonder if anybody can recall the rest of it.

Miss Braddon

A correspondent writes:—

I notice in some recent articles commemorating the centenary of the birth of Miss M. E. Braddon a curious discrepancy respecting her parentage. According to one account her mother is said to have been the daughter of J. White, of the County Cavan, while another states that the novelist's mother was a daughter of P. White, of Limerick.

The "D.N.B." partly serves to explain how this discrepancy may have arisen; for it is there stated that the popular novelist's mother was Fanny, daughter of J. White, of County Cavan. Miss Braddon had a distinguished brother, Sir Edward Nicholas Coventry Braddon, Premier of Tasmania, who, according to the "D.N.B.," was the third and only surviving son of Henry Braddon, solicitor, by his wife Fanny, daughter of Patrick White, of Limerick.

While this explains how the discrepancy just referred to arose, it does not entirely remove the source of it.

The Squash Rackets Season : Necessity of a Coach : A Table Tennis Scheme

By PAUL DENIS

Busy Opening to the Season

THE Irish squash rackets season does not get properly under way until the beginning of November, but in actual fact the majority of the courts in Dublin are filled every evening, and several of them are also busy in the middle of the day, when people use their lunch hour to get in some exercise. The best news at present is that the three courts in Trinity will be ready for use before Christmas. They were held up by the building strike, but, nevertheless, it is likely that Trinity will enter a team for the Dublin inter-club league. Inside the next two or three years Trinity will be fostering future Irish champions, for they ought to turn out numbers of excellent players. Will University College follow Trinity's lead and take up squash is the next question that might be asked. For young men studying hard for examinations and unable to devote much time to the exercise that they would normally take, squash is ideal. It provides all the necessary relaxation in half-an-hour, and no university should overlook its advantages. In 86 Stephen's Green University College have an ideal building in which to put up a court or two and further encourage the growth of this excellent game.

Learn the Game Properly

With the promise of scores of young men taking up the game—the membership of the Trinity Club is over eighty, even before the courts have been completed—and with a number of young women also anxious to benefit by the exercise the time is ripe to engage a professional from England, if even for a short time only. The Association has quite a useful balance on the right side after two years of existence, and it would improve the standard enormously if a number of young players were to learn the game from the start on the right lines. Not many beginners realise the necessity of keeping the ball up and down the side-walls to a good length; they are too often lured into trying spectacular angle shots which can seldom win a point. Few players here, even those with experience, produce their shots with the proper wrist action and minimum of swing; so, therefore, few lessons can be taught by example. The essence of squash, of course, is footwork, and a professional will have you moving about the court far more rapidly than you would ever believe yourself capable of. The Association ought not to hesitate, but should secure the services of a teacher during the next two or three months.

Table Tennis Coaching Scheme

Despite its tens of thousands of adherents the game of table tennis seems to have reached rather a dangerous phase. The success of the stone-waller has been ruining the game from every point of view, and the authorities throughout the world are making the most strenuous efforts to get rid of the pest and encourage attacking play. Whether it be a lack of technique or, as I suspect, a failing in temperament, Ireland's players do not compare well with those of any other country, so I am glad to see that the Association is embarking on a coaching scheme for young players. The present game of table tennis requires not only skill and quickness, but also extreme patience. When the heavier ball was used away back in the "old days," fourteen or fifteen years ago, a really hard drive could nearly always score a point outright, but now, with a lighter ball, more room in which to move around, and rubber-faced rackets, back comes the most deadly-looking smash. Apparent winners might be returned a dozen times before the attacker can play the decisive shot, and the retriever can, as often as not, defeat the attacker. We have players over here with good technique, the outstanding example being C. A. Kemp, but in most cases the patience to wait for an opening before making a kill is lacking. Barna, the famous Hungarian, was essentially an aggressive player, always on the look-out for winners, but he was prepared to play a rally for ten minutes if he could not see the opening for an outright winner. That is a lesson our players will have to learn without sacrificing attacking methods.

Much-travelled Hockey Players

In these times the easiest and most pleasant way of getting about and seeing the world is to achieve proficiency at games. The world-famous figures, such as Fred Perry, Walter Hagen, Joe Kirkwood, and others who make the head-lines on the sporting pages, get a surfeit of travelling, and must long to spend a few quiet weeks at home now and again, but for the average player of a game the journey to a foreign country represents almost the summit of ambition. Women hockey players have an enviable time. On two occasions an Irish team has toured in America, and now the Maids of the Mountain Club are off to Germany. They are doing things in style, too, for although they are only playing four matches, in Leipzig, Hanover and Magdeburg, they will be spending almost a fortnight in Germany. As a British men's tour of India has been suggested for the near future, it would seem to be a case of play hockey and see the world.

Unsatisfactory Position

There is little or no abatement in the number of amateur boxing contests in Dublin which have to be stopped by the referee owing to eyebrow cuts sustained by one of the men, and so the position remains thoroughly unsatisfactory. In most cases the cut comes from a collision of heads, and the County Dublin Board are writing to the Central Council of the I.A.B.A. asking them to instruct referees to be much stricter in future in disqualifying boxers who go head-first into an opponent. There are a number of men, well-known boxers in several instances, whose natural style is to keep the head low and bore in all the time, and it is also a style popular on the Continent. It is difficult under these circumstances to rule out these men, but accidents are bound to occur which put an end to what might have been very good contests. Even though clubs may be instructed to teach their youngsters an upright style of boxing, collisions will hardly be averted by this, and the eyebrow protector, which I advocated in these notes a couple of weeks ago, may yet prove to be the only solution to a rather aggravating state of affairs.

APPEAL IN AID OF A DESERVING CASE

May Lady FitzGerald Arnott, Dunardagh, Blackrock, Co. Dublin, and Miss Dowse, The Crescent, Monkstown, appeal for attention to the case of the widow and invalid daughter of a clergyman who are without any support. The death of the clergyman occurred five weeks ago. He officiated for fifty-six years in the Church on a small stipend. He was interested in charitable works in aid of the industrious poor, and his last effort on their behalf involved him in unexpected liability. The circumstances of misfortune are personally known to Lady FitzGerald Arnott and Miss Dowse, sister of the late Bishop of Cork, who will gladly acknowledge any contribution and give any information that may be required. Lady FitzGerald Arnott has forwarded to Miss Dowse £100. She and Miss Dowse trust that a sufficient amount may be subscribed to provide the deserving family with a small comfortable home.

At Limavady yesterday Hugh Gallagher and John Marshall, both of Ballyclose street, Limavady, were each fined 20s. for keeping premises for the purposes of betting.

MODERN HOSPITALS IN FREE STATE

INTERESTING DUBLIN EXHIBITION

During the past seven years many new hospitals have been built in the Free State, and very many more have been reconstructed, improved, and fitted out with the latest in medical and surgical equipment. In addition, such facilities have been provided for the patient (both extern and intern), the doctor, the nurse and other members of the staffs that the majority of Irish hospitals compare favourably with similar institutions in any part of the world.

This week at a photographic exhibition in the Engineers' Hall, Dawson street, Dublin, the vast and almost unknown improvements which have been made possible by the hospitals' share of the sweepstake fund are placed before the public for the first time, and in the most vivid manner.

The exhibition, which will be open to-day and to-morrow from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m., and on Saturday from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m., has been organised by Hospitals' Trust, Ltd. Models, photographs and statistics show the different stages of hospital work and activities in all parts of the country.

There are about 160 photographs of the hospitals and institutions (numbering over 70) which now come under the Hospitals' Commission scheme. The views are of new buildings, surgeons' residences, nurses' homes, chapels, operating theatres, lecture halls, X-ray departments, assistant medical officers' residences, extern patients' departments, wards, sun balconies, gymnasiums, swimming baths, maids' homes and extern waiting rooms.

Visitors to the exhibition will be surprised to see that such facilities exist at their own doors. How many of the ordinary citizens of Cork, for instance, realise that the local Eye, Ear and Throat Hospital houses a giant magnet, used to remove foreign bodies from the eye and other parts of the body? There is a photograph of the magnet at work, and photographs also of sun balconies and a swimming pool in a Dublin children's hospital.

In the centre of the hall there are scale models of the new central hospital at Kilkenny and of the new hospital at Tullamore, and along one of the walls books of Press cuttings from the great newspapers of the world.

To date, £11,118,682 has been allocated to the hospitals out of the Hospitals' Trust fund. The exhibition, which shows how part of the money already has been spent, is well worthy of a visit.

PHŒNIX PARK A BIRD SANCTUARY

WARNING NOTICES POSTED

Notices are now conspicuously posted at various spots in the Phœnix Park, to the effect that any one taking, destroying or injuring any of the birds in the Park, or their nests or eggs, commits an offence against the bye-laws that renders him liable to a penalty of five pounds.

These notices have been set up by an order of the Commissioners of Public Works, in accordance with a promise given by them to the Committee of the Irish Society for Protection of Birds. The effect of this order is to make the Park a sanctuary for wild birds.

SCHOOL MEDICAL EXAMINATION

PUPILS WHO WERE UNCLEAN

Of a total of 664 pupils in a Dun Laoghaire school 302 suffered from uncleanliness last month, states Dr. J. A. Harbison, County Medical Health Officer, in a report submitted to the County Health Board yesterday.

In the same school 162 pupils (31 boys and 131 girls) suffered from malnutrition—a figure "distinctly above the average"; 456 suffered from dental defects, 48 from defective vision, 67 from tonsils and adenoids, and 39 from anæmia.

Dr. Harbison, who said that the parents of 174 of the children were present at the examination, added that 134 pupils were unvaccinated

Referring in his report to water supplies, Dr. Harbison says:—"Considerable difficulty has been experienced in maintaining water supplies in certain parts of the county, particularly in North County Dublin, and where, owing to continued drought, alternate supplies may have to be hastily sought, I would recommend that the Board provide an emergency chlorinator for the purpose of sterilising water supplies where water at the sources may be unfit for drinking without sterilisation."

HOW MOTOR CARS ARE BUILT

ACCURATE GAUGES

How long would it take you to dismantle and re-assemble an eight-cylinder motor car engine? Two mechanics at the Ford Motor Show in London are demonstrating the simplicity of Ford engines by taking one to pieces and re-assembling it again in fifteen minutes.

They are two of the detachment of Ford operatives who are demonstrating the work carried on in the Ford factories. There is a grading room, where men match engine parts in sets to ensure perfect balance; visitors may "listen-in" to the gear-listening test with which the mechanics ensure the silent running of gears, and watch a crankshaft balancer at work.

Some of the men at work at the exhibition are using instruments accurate to one-ten thousandth part of an inch, while the gauges on view include some capable of measuring to one-millionth of an inch.

Novel methods, such as an engine in which the cylinder block becomes transparent, are used to show the public design features of Ford cars.

Nearly eighty cars, commercial vehicles, tractors and chassis are on view. Several different examples of the Ford "Ten" are displayed to illustrate the choice of body colours and upholstery available. This car has a fine performance and riding smoothness, which has been attained by the between-the-axles seating. Motorists who desire a full six-seater car are catered for by the range of Ford V-8 "30" body types. An entirely new system of silent body-mounting, and suspension modifications, make for remarkably smooth riding in these cars, which have a splendid performance. Another interesting body type is the "Utility" Car, seating eight and easily convertible for carrying large quantities of baggage. It is largely used on country estates, by hotels, and as a shooting brake.

Other features of the exhibition include a 17ft. trailer coach fully equipped as an all-the-year-round mobile home for a family. A light monoplane, powered with a conversion of the Ford "Ten" engine, and a motor launch, fitted with a marine-style Ford engine and capable of 23 knots, are also on view.

Among those present at this exhibition were:—Messrs. J. O'Neill, managing director, Henry Ford and Son, Cork; S. H. Dring, sales manager; T. F. O'Mahoney, advertising manager; W. Colclough and N. F. Russell, sales representatives; E. L. Clarke, T. McCarthy, F. Rogers, P. F. Quinlan, P. J. Kennedy, W. Slattery, W. P. Elsey, J. W. Naismith, W. P. Higgins, E. O'Neill, R. W. Archer, J. C. Cooney, M. Sheridan, F. Cassidy, E. Hickey, W. Benner, E. McEnroe, M. Dawson, T. L. McGee, L. Lemass, F. Hyder, P. Murphy, Dr. P. H. Lemass, Superintendent O'Neill, Messrs. D. King, W. Cogan, G. Statham and R. Nolan.

In recognition of his unique feat of scoring 3,000 runs and taking 100 wickets, J. H. Parks is to receive a cheque for £50 and a silver salver from the Sussex County Cricket Club. The brothers James and John Langridge, who each scored over 2,000 runs last summer, will receive mementoes valued £10.

SHOE AND LEATHER WEEK

SUGGESTED EXHIBITION NEXT YEAR

Proposals for the holding of an Irish Shoe and Leather Exhibition and National Shoe and Leather Week during 1938 are contained in the October issue of the "Irish Shoe Trades Journal."

Mr. B. Clancy, the publisher, states that inquiries have revealed the necessity of such an exhibition, which would provide an opportunity of showing to the public and the trade generally the advanced state of the development of the industry and the varied range and quality of Irish shoes, leather and associated products. The exhibition also would co-ordinate the various branches of the trade, and would result in the setting up of a statistical committee to investigate the extent of the home market for each class of goods, and thus avoid the establishment of too many firms.

LOUD SPEAKERS IN COURT

TESTED IN MURDER CHARGE

MOST UNSATISFACTORY, SAYS JUDGE

FROM OUR REPORTER.

THE difficulty experienced in the past in hearing low-voiced witnesses at Green Street Courthouse was as notable yesterday, when the sitting of the Central Criminal Court opened, as it ever had been, notwithstanding the installation of an amplifying apparatus—for the loud-speakers were not working when they were required.

At one stage, when the jury complained that they could not hear a witness, Mr. Justice Gavan Duffy exclaimed: "It is most unsatisfactory." As for the Press, the witness's answers that were repeated by counsel were like a few scattered bricks with which the reporters endeavoured to build their reports.

During the preliminary proceedings, when counsel were being assigned to prisoners charged with serious offences, the loud speakers were in operation. The microphones were affixed near the judge—who, however, speaks so clearly that in his case none really was necessary—and on the ledges of the witness boxes, but at this part of the proceedings the witness boxes were not in use, so the value of the apparatus was not put to the test.

When the murder trial, which was before the Court for the afternoon, and which is likely to continue for some days, was begun after the luncheon adjournment, the amplifiers were not operating. They were not seriously missed during counsel's opening speech, nor during the examination of the first witnesses, police officers, who were well used to giving evidence at Green street, but afterwards the necessity for such an apparatus was glaringly apparent.

During the adjournment the microphones were being tested, but when the Court resumed the faint whine, scarcely audible unless one were listening for it, which indicated that the power was "on," was no longer apparent.

SWITCHED OFF

It was stated that the apparatus had been switched off by order of the Judge, to whom representations had been made.

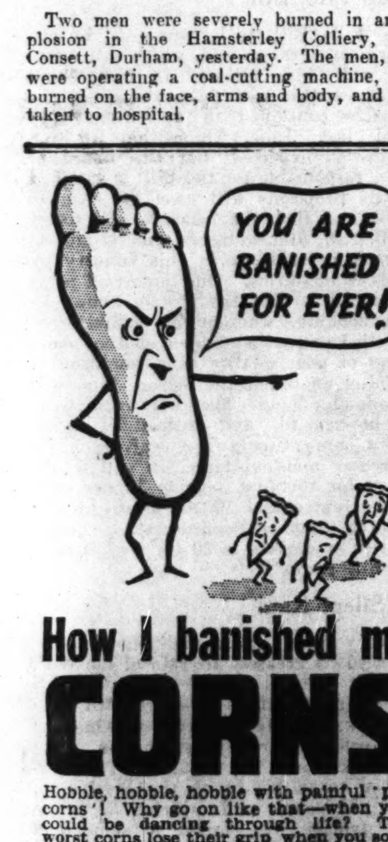

One of the objections, it is understood, was that the necessary conversations between counsel and solicitors during the hearing of a case would be overheard by the judge or the public in court. So far as the Irish Times reporter could observe during the time that the amplifiers were working, nothing could be heard through the loud-speakers apart from the words spoken at a distance of about eighteen inches or less from the microphones. The idea that whispers between lawyers seated at a distance of some feet from any of the three microphones would be amplified, is palpably absurd. The speakers are going to be adjusted for the magnification of a voice sufficiently to make it clear to a box of jurymen sitting about fifteen feet away, not for such amplification as would be required at a public meeting in the open-air, or for a broadcast from Croke Park.

A second objection is that the loud speaking apparatus might result in the elimination of whatever could be learned from the tone of a witness's voice, as to whether he was telling the truth or not, or whether he seemed reliable. That is something which only experience can confirm or refute; but the fact remains that loud speaking apparatus is common in United States Courts and is employed in the Northern Ireland High Courts, where it seems to have given every satisfaction.

NECESSARY

Journalists with experience of the difficulty of hearing witnesses at Green Street naturally are in favour of the loud speaking apparatus being put into use, but witnesses which are inaudible in the Press-box usually are inaudible in the jury-box as well. This article has not been written to dispute the views of counsel with regard to the apparatus; for, obviously, in the case of a lawyer defending in a serious charge, like murder, the interests of his client must be safeguarded in even the smallest and, at first sight, extraneous detail. Possibly when a charge of lesser gravity is before the Court it will be advisable to give the apparatus a test under real working conditions, and to ascertain if the objections made yesterday can be met.

Two men were severely burned in an explosion in the Hamsterley Colliery, near Consett, Durham, yesterday. The men, who were operating a coal-cutting machine, were burned on the face, arms and body, and were taken to hospital.

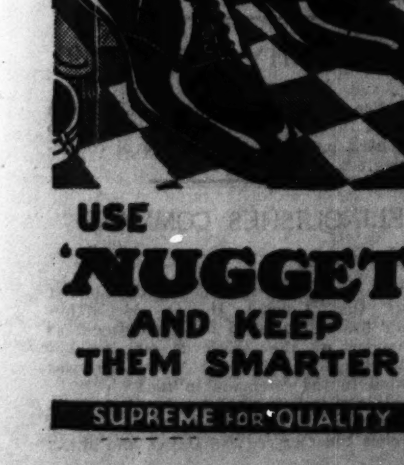

How I banished my CORNS

Hobble, hobble, hobble with painful pet corns! Why go on like that—when you could be dancing through life? The worst corns lose their grip when you soak your poor old feet in a soothing oxygen bath! That's what this man found: he was crippled with corns, but now he writes:—

"I had three corns altogether, and was crippled with them. Corn paints, etc., were no use, but Radox quickly banished them—and there is no sign of them returning. It is wonderful—the feeling of ease after a footbath! My wife had corns on her second toe, which were very painful. Corn ointment inflamed the corns and made them twice the size, but Radox cured the inflammation and brought the corns right out."—D. C., Pendleton.

FIRST—OXYGEN: THEN—SALTS . . . To-night—give your feet a soothing bath of Radox . . . a few Radox crystals sprinkled in a basin of hottish water. Busy bubbles of oxygen are given off at once—burrow down through your acid-choked pores—make way for the active salts that loosen the very roots of the corn—till it slips out with a heavenly sensation of relief! Lose that limp to-night—get a packet of Radox to-day! All Chemists sell Radox, 1/6 and 2/6 packets.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

ST. AUDOEN'S CHURCH

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

SIR,—In your interesting description yesterday of the visit of the Old Dublin Society to St. Audöen's Church, High street, you mentioned in the altar plate "a paten stated to date back to the fourteenth century." If this is accurate, it is of great importance to collectors, as I think our earliest church plate is the chalice and paten known as "the De Burgo," and dating from the fifteenth century—from 1494.

This priceless plate was formerly in the possession of the late Lord Swaythling, and is now in our National Museum.

I should like to be corrected if wrong.—Yours, etc.,

A. W. B. MACK.

Strawberry Hill, Dalkey, Co. Dublin,
October 19th, 1937.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

SIR,—Some of the statements in your report of the Old Dublin Society's visit to St. Audöen's on Saturday last are not quite correct, and for the guidance of those who are seekers after facts I would be obliged if you will be so kind as to allow me to correct them.

The present church is the western end of the Norman building, and is not called the Portlester Chapel (whom you refer to as Baron FitzEustace). The Portlester Chapel, now in ruins, is really the south-eastern end of the building, and was the last portion to be added in the year 1455. The baron's family name was FitzEustace, and Eustace street is called after a member of this family.

The altar in St. Anne's Guild Chapel was not known as the Italian Trinity, but, on an archway behind where the altar stood, there was a mural painting—the only one of its kind in the United Kingdom—known as the Italian Trinity. It portrayed Our Lord on the Cross surrounded by angels. This painting, I am sorry to say, was allowed to decay. Over this archway there is a lepers' cell, where from barred windows the lepers might hear the Service. In the same wall there are also two squints where the people in the Guild House could look into the church. The memorial slab is to Sir Anthony King, not Sir Stanley.

There is no bell in the tower with the name Matthew Paris on it, but from records I ascertained that Matthew Paris made two of the bells. The three bells cast in 1423 are the oldest in Ireland, if not in the Three Kingdoms. The present tower was built in 1169, not, as you state, in the fifteenth century.

I am sorry that I cannot agree with the suggestion put forward by my good friend Father O'Ryan regarding the history of the name Audöen. In early deeds the church is referred to as St. Ouen's, or St. Owen's, Church.

In closing, I might mention that nearly all the Mayors and Lord Mayors of the city, from about 1300 to 1750 are buried in the church, as are also a vast number of aldermen.—Yours, etc.,

ALEX. E. DONOVAN, Hon. Parochial Treasurer of St. Audöen's.

"MACBETH"

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

SIR,—I would like wholeheartedly to associate myself with your correspondent Mr. R. D. Chadwick's (of London) views as to the criticism of "Macbeth" at the Gate Theatre by your dramatic critic, "A. E. M."

As a regular patron of the Gate Theatre, and one who has seen all their Shakespearean productions, I felt that "Macbeth" was quite one of the finest they had yet done.

It was with amazement that I read your critic's impressions. He has a perfect right to his personal likes and dislikes, but I do not see that if you dislike a play from the literary standpoint that you should, therefore, condemn its production and acting unless they were worthy of condemnation, which was most certainly not the case. The production and acting of the principal parts of this play were on a very high plane; the acting of Hilton Edwards as "Macbeth" was worth seeing, apart from anything else; also the lighting and settings. The play is an artistic triumph. It is yet again another warning to the public to see for themselves, and not to depend on the haphazard criticism which, unfortunately, is the rule of to-day.—Yours, etc.,

"PLAY-GOER."

NEW PUBLISHING HOUSE

CHEAP AND ATTRACTIVE BOOKS

Under the name Lindsay Drummond, Ltd., a new publishing house has begun business, with offices in Buckingham street, London, W.C.2. The publishers believe that there is a persistent demand by many intelligent people for informative books, produced attractively at a reasonable price; and it is their intention to meet this demand. Books of an educational character will be one of their main concerns. Teachers will be supplied with new, or up-to-date books on their own subjects; and while these books will be technical in the main they should appeal to a public wider than members of the profession if they are written by experts, and in the right way. General works of biography, travel and science also will be produced; but for the moment no fiction is being considered. Horticulture is a field which will receive considerable attention, one member of the firm enjoying an extensive knowledge of the subject.

In addition, the firm will act as distributors for "New Verse," which is edited by Mr. Geoffrey Grigson. The next number will contain a new poem by Mr. W. H. Auden, written specially for the occasion, and there also will be a bibliography of his works.

There is an attractive list of titles for the present season, which includes "Moutains of the Moon," by Mr. Patrick M. Synge, and "Scratch a Russian," by H. S. Marchant.

AMALGAMATED SOCIETY OF DYERS

The members of the Dublin Branch of the Amalgamated Society of Dyers, Bleachers, Finishers and Kindred Trades have decided to transfer themselves to the Irish Transport and General Workers' Union.

The necessary resolution was passed at a meeting in the Trades Hall, Capel street, at which about 250 members, including all those who are on the Branch Committee, were present. Arrangements are being made for the completing of the transfer, and a branch secretary and committee have been appointed. Mr. Denis Galavan retains the former office, and Mr. James Dolan has been elected chairman of the new branch.

THE POET IN THE THEATRE

AN AUDIENCE AND A PLAYHOUSE

MR. YEATS'S DREAM

By PADRAIC FALLON.

IN Ireland for many years poetry has been the outcast of the theatre. The revival of a verse play by Yeats at the Abbey has loaned this Cinderella her shoes on occasions; but it must be plain to everybody by this time that the Irish Dramatic Movement, while it has achieved a successful and genuine theatre, has quite failed to fulfil that function, which of all its intended functions, was perhaps the nearest to the heart of Mr. Yeats. "Plays and Controversies," those essays in which Mr. Yeats unfolded his dream of a theatre in which the poet would be truly at home, make sad reading at this hour of the day to any poet who has no wish to subside into the silence of a slim volume or to nurse a speckled shin in the corner of a magazine. He is aware, after all, that he is the first-born of the theatre, and that the great periods of the drama belong to him. His birthright is supported by his achievement, and if the theatre refuses him now it argues his ill-health or the ill-health of the theatre or the ill condition of things in general.

Wherever or whatever the cause it is a bad thing for poetry that it lacks a public platform, and for the theatre that it has come to lack poetry. Each made its life of the other. Poetry was the private life of the theatre; the theatre the public life of poetry: neither can be complete, real, imaginative, or powerful, lacking the other. How they may be brought together is the question of the moment with all poets. I propose to show here that the way in which the question is answered in Ireland will be important, not alone for the theatre, but for Irish culture in general.

Poetry and Culture

In the first place, I would emphasise the importance of poetry in any culture. Someone has said that a nation is born in poetry. Certainly, all god-ceremonies in their beginnings were the work of poets who were also priests; and prophets, to be heard in their own countries had, too, to be poets. The first poetry could be defined as religion; religion as poetry. Nations could be mapped by the god-rituals they affected. Poetry at this period would, of necessity, be national in its best sense—meaning that it would express the communal life in its relations to the external world—in symbols which would be broad enough to be significant to all its people, gentle and simple. Its separation from religion in course of time has not released poetry from this function. It may be said rather to have released itself from dogma while retaining, in part at any rate, its communications with those primordial images which underlie consciousness and are the sources of religious feeling.

It is nourished from the whole of life, however, the conscious and the unconscious, and, in return, is concerned equally with all the branches of life, with the passion that went into the Via Dolorosa and the passion of the Song of Solomon. It must be the oldest of the arts, for it is made of words, and words being pictures in sound that combine both sensual and intellectual meaning would be the first understandable currency between a man and his soul and between men and the communal soul. In a definite pattern where the words keep musical time, it has the effect of two arts, verse and music. And, whatever else may be said about it, it has proved to be an ideal instrument for soldering the irrational to the rational elements of man's vision of himself, and that—when all is said—is the measure of the importance of any art.

Not Native to Ireland

If poetry, then, is of such psychical importance, it may be asked why a verse play will not fill any middle-sized theatre. The question, I think, can be countered by pointing to England—a humanistic country, from which we borrowed the framework of our theatre—and by asking: Why, since religion is so important to the psyche, are the churches there so empty of worshippers? The answer to one question would, I hold, answer both. The growing emphasis on reason and all that it stands for, the isolating of the self to a consciousness in which, as Jung has it, "there is no legitimate place in our world for invisible, arbitrary, and so-called supernatural forces," has emptied verse of power as it has emptied liturgy of meaning.

In Ireland this does not hold to such a large extent. We have not canonised the scientist, and the large majority of the people have a living faith that engages the primitive energies of the unconscious. But there is, in Ireland, another reason. The convention of the verse play has never been native to Ireland as to England. A verse drama, of course, existed in Dublin for a considerable time after it had lapsed in England, but it was an offshoot of the English theatre and provincial; it never got its roots into the life of this country, and so, when it discovered it was the usual quarter of a century behind English fashion, and rang down the curtain, it left no tradition and no sense of loss. The country at large was entirely unaffected; it had its great body of native poetry and—the native equivalent of the verse play—its professional reciters; verse was spoken, was made to be spoken, and—as many who have stayed in the remoter parts of the country will agree—is still spoken so excitingly that one can see without craning one's neck that the art came out of the need it satisfied. It is not a stage art. I cannot see it control the emotions of a large body of people from the footlights in its present stage of evolution, but I think that, given contact with our age, time to adapt to itself our modern technical devices, and our modern speech rhythms, that it would fill some need beyond that of mere entertainment. And we cannot say for certain that it will not fill a middling theatre until it has had the opportunity to experiment.

A New Audience

The trouble is that verse drama requires from an audience a response different from that demanded by the usual prose play. An instance of this came my way recently when a play by Jean Cocteau was played at the Gate. (The play was not in verse, but the texture was that of the poetic play.) I was told that the play should have ended in the second act; that, after it, there was no dramatic movement; yet it was the third act that contained for me all of the drama and the whole essence of the play. The situation was flattened and treated in pattern; action looked at itself as in a mirror, and, seeing itself in all its tenses, did not trouble to confine itself within a gesturing present, the result, I thought, was the same uncanny widening of the moment that is to be found in a good lyric.

This is not the art of the naturalist drama, but to a poet it is the more exciting. The situation is given, commented on, used for its lyrical value, and finally lifted up as a symbol. The solution is not through action, but through lyrical emotion, and that is the difficulty for an audience accustomed to action and forward headlong movement. It is a grave difficulty, for it means that if the poet is to get his work over at all he must create a new type of audience, and this will immediately separate him from the commercial theatre and the monetary benefit that it stands for; it means, in fine, that he must begin amateurishly and in a very small way.

London's Verse Theatre

If an audience is to be created, it must have a theatre in which it can gather at regular intervals. In Dublin there are, I fancy, enough people with sufficient interest in verse-speaking to keep a very small theatre going. Those are the people a poet has in mind when he writes, and they are the people for whom no theatre caters at present.

In London already there is a middle-sized theatre devoted entirely to plays in verse, and there is much activity among amateur dramatic societies, and this is due chiefly to the efforts of such poet dramatists as Dr. Gordon Bottomley, who, recognising at last—at long last—that the verse play was a separate art and a mode essentially different from the mode of the modern commercial prose play, very wisely accepted it as such. They began at the very beginning by insisting on a speech that respected their rhythms, and that this is half the battle, we in Dublin will agree who saw here last year a play of T. S. Eliot's enlarged beyond life-size by the art of a company whose personnel had learned to speak verse perfectly.

The Abbey Theatre

The Abbey Theatre is so festooned with controversies that I feel I am ungracious in dragging it into this article otherwise than honourably. The fact that it has solidified within its own convention, and does good work within those limits, entitles it to be left alone. When a poet of the size of Gordon Bottomly, however, confesses to having been inspired by it in his—and its—youth, one is forced to square up to the melancholy fact that in it at the present time the poetic drama forms no part of the repertoire. That, of course, one can see—and forgive—as an economic consequence. The Abbey is a national theatre, but it must be commercial in order to live.

To play verse to empty houses is worse than to play music to empty pockets. But the convention could have been made when the Peacock, a tiny theatre under the Abbey roof, was opened some years ago. That this was not availed of is, from my point of view, the chief failure of the Abbey. Here was the—very nearly—ideal place for experiment, and yet the directors—among them a world-famous poet, whose plays in the Noe mode are models of a kind—chose to hire it out, chose to use it as a school that would feed the prose stage with new blood, chose any use for it rather than the right and inevitable use that one expects, not unreasonably, from a theatre that claims to be national

Poetic Values

No one need draw Mr. Yeats' attention to the human and superhuman values that poetry stands for, he has given what was important of himself to it in the course of a long life, but in this he has not given it the fosterage that is its right, he has not played up to his own Seanchan. His later work shows how fully conscious he is of the verse play as a separate art. It is extraordinary how he could have missed the obvious implication that an art demands to use its own special instruments. One cannot paint with speech or orate with a paint brush. An actor learns on the prose stage that his personality is a very important supplement to an author's words, it is left to him to devise the rhythm in which they are to move. The contrary is true of verse. The poet makes the rhythm, to which the speaker must submit. Mr. Yeats has not fully recognised that—in practice, at least—with the result that those verse plays of his which could have been done perfectly in the Peacock by specially trained players have been done badly in the Abbey. A curious corollary to this is that in order to get an idea over the Abbey footlights he has on occasions been forced into prose. And such an admission of failure from a poet of his standing could be taken to mean that poetry itself had failed.

Poetic drama, of course, has failed. But then the circumstances were at stand-to against it. It cannot live in a prose theatre or in a prose convention. It must have its own. And no theatre can be called a national theatre which does not provide for it to the full. England goes ahead where Ireland stopped short, and the result is that the younger Irish poets are looking overseas for intellectual leadership—and a paper audience.

DUBLIN CIRCUIT COURT

VISITORS ONLY ON SUNDAYS

POSSESSION APPLICATION REFUSED

(BEFORE JUDGE DAVITT.)

Denis Kirby, 4 Chelmsford road, Ranelagh, Dublin, sued Leo McGarry, same address, for possession of the front top room of the house at Chelmsford road held by Mr. McGarry as a weekly tenant.

Mrs. Kirby, wife of the plaintiff, stated that according to the terms of the tenancy the defendant was not to have visitors except on Sundays. Visitors, however, frequently came during each week-day and left late at night. The wife of the defendant, the witness said, used to bang doors and sang frequently.

The defendant said that he had only official visits from his inspector and a very few friends, who came in for a game of chess. He denied that his wife banged the doors. He had three children, the youngest of whom was only six months, and his wife had been prevented from using the back garden and hanging out washing.

Judge Davitt refused the order for possession, both sides to bear its own costs.

Mr. C. O'Daly (instructed by Mr. L. Trant McCarthy) appeared for the plaintiff; Mr. S. Crivon (instructed by Mr. L. J. Jameson) appeared for the defendant.

TWO CLAIMS DISMISSED

(BEFORE JUDGE SHANNON.)

Claim and counter claim were dismissed, with costs, in an action by Noel J. Kenny, garage proprietor, Raglan lane, Ballsbridge, Dublin, against Thomas F. O'Keeffe, solicitor, Mitchelstown, Co. Cork, for £139 for loss and damage alleged to have been caused by reason of the negligence of the defendant, his servants or agents, in the control and management of a motor car at the junction of Lr. O'Connell street and Eden quay on February 27th, 1937.

The defendant's motor car, it was stated, collided with the taxi cab of the plaintiff, who valued the taxi at £75 and loss of earnings for a period of eight weeks at £61 12s.

The defence was a denial of negligence and a plea of contributory negligence on the part of the plaintiff, and the defendant counter-claimed for a sum of £24 5s. 2d. for damage to his motor car through the alleged negligence of the plaintiff.

Mr. H. Clancy (instructed by Mr. B. Finnegan) appeared for the plaintiff, and Mr. J. P. Murnane (instructed by Messrs. Good and Murray) appeared for the defendant.

THREATENED STRIKE DECLARED OFF

FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.

TUAM, Tuesday.

The threatened strike of members of the Irish Engineering Union at Tuam Beet Factory has been declared off on the agreement between the Sugar Board and the executive of the union that a conciliation board will be set up to consider the dispute at issue.

The campaign will open in the factory in the first week of November.

DEATH AFTER A PARTY

CUSTOMS OFFICER'S BICYCLE FALL

A verdict that death was due to fracture of the skull, resulting from a fall from a bicycle at Knocknalun, Co. Monaghan, on Sunday last, was returned at an inquest in the Richmond Hospital yesterday on Peter O'Hare (39), a Customs officer, of Scotstown, Co. Monaghan, who died in the hospital on Monday.

The evidence was that O'Hare had been at a party in the house of John McKenna, Knocknalun, and left about 6 o'clock on Sunday morning to cycle home. Later in the day he was found lying unconscious at the foot of a steep hill. After being examined locally he was taken to the Richmond Hospital.

In their verdict the jury stated that there was no evidence to show how the man had fallen from the bicycle.

The Coroner (Dr. D. A. MacErlean) said that it was possible that the machine may have got out of control.

Inspector Sheppard represented the Civic Guards.

TRADE DISPUTES

BACON TRADE STRIKE POSSIBLE

About 1,400 workers in the bacon-curing industry in Cork, Waterford, Limerick and Tralee are likely to take strike action on the 7th of November if their claims are not met in the meantime. The stoppage would affect about 50 per cent. of the internal and export bacon trade of the Irish Free State.

It is understood that there will be no strike in the Irish sugar industry this season. The claims of the members of the Irish Engineering Industrial Union and the Irish Transport and General Workers Union have been referred to the newly-established Conciliation Board for the industry.

Negotiations are to be continued in connection with the demands of the Irish Transport and General Workers Union on behalf of workers employed in the Lucan Dairies Company. The negotiators are to report back to the men by Monday next.

GREAT BRITAIN

Lord Rutherford, the distinguished man of science, died last night in a nursing home at Cambridge.—(Page 7.)

The French Government's plan for dealing with foreign intervention in Spain made little progress at the Chairman's Sub-Committee of the Non-Intervention Committee at the Foreign Office in London yesterday, at which Mr. Eden presided. After sitting for three and a half hours the meeting ended inconclusively, but the delegates will come together again this afternoon.—(Page 7.)

ABROAD

The curfew order in Jerusalem was rescinded yesterday. The general situation in Palestine is reported to be easier—(Page 7.)

SPORTING

At Wolverhampton yesterday Mickey Mouse won the Staffordshire Handicap.—(Page 10.)

At Newcastle Seneschalstown won the Newcastle Autumn Handicap.—(Page 10.)

FINANCIAL

London Stock Markets developed weakness yesterday, and prices were substantially lowered all round. Industrial and Mining sections were the chief sufferers.—(Page 12.)

Gold advanced 1d. to 140s. 5½d. per oz., and £469,000 in bars was sold. The premium over the dollar parity was increased to 2¼d.—(Page 12.)

More Delay

As everybody who takes the least interest in the matter anticipated, yesterday's meeting of the Non-Intervention Committee in London ended in another deadlock. At one period it seemed as if the meeting would be adjourned sine die; but the British Foreign Secretary, who presided, having made a manful effort to bring about some measure of agreement, persuaded the delegates to come together again this afternoon, in the hope that something might happen in the meanwhile to cut the Gordian knot. The whole business really is a sorry farce. Time and again the British Government has tried to secure the withdrawal of foreign "volunteers" from Spain; time and again its efforts have been thwarted by the obstructive tactics of one or other of the Powers that are involved in the Spanish imbroglio. When Mr. Eden proposed his plan last July it was accepted, as usual, by everybody "in principle"; but when it came to the taking of practical measures to give effect to the plan, all sorts of difficulties were placed in the way, and, in effect, nothing was done. Now the French have propounded a plan. Last week M. Corbin explained it in detail to the members of the London Committee, and once again everybody agreed "in principle"; yesterday it became obvious at an early stage of the proceedings that once again nothing would be done. Actually what happened was that the Italian delegate, Count Grandi, discovered a new way to postpone decision. He recommended the re-examination of the plan that had been advanced by Mr. Eden last July, on the ground that it was an "excellent" plan, and apparently far superior to that which has been sponsored by the French. Mr. Eden, who showed a restraint that was as commendable as it was remarkable, pointed out that the French plan was based on the British, and that the former included the latter; but the German Chargé d'Affaires, who, in the absence of Herr von Ribbentrop, represented Herr Hitler, supported his Italian colleague. The net result of the whole day's discussions was precisely nothing. Matters are just where they were more than three months ago, and it is more than likely that they will remain there after to-day's meeting of the Committee.

The plain truth is that Italy does not want to withdraw a single Italian soldier from the Peninsula until General Franco's victory shall have been assured. This fact must be crystal-clear to anybody who has taken the trouble to read the Italian newspapers during the last twelve months—particularly Signor Mussolini's own mouthpiece, the Popolo d'Italia. Even Count Grandi declared publicly at an early meeting of the London Committee that, in his personal opinion, not a single Italian volunteer would leave Spain until after the war. Estimates have differed regarding the actual number of Italian soldiers in Spain. Italian spokesmen have been wisely reticent on the subject; but the Spanish Government has declared that as many as 80,000 Italian troops have been engaged. Now it is announced officially in Rome that the real number is in the neighbourhood of 40,000, and we may be sure that this figure does not err on the side of exaggeration. To suggest that this force is composed of genuine volunteers is preposterous. Signor Mussolini has boasted of their exploits—although his tone was rather piano in his references to Guadalajara; he has referred to them as national heroes, and has made it entirely clear that he alone is responsible for their participation in the Spanish fighting. There hardly can be more than 15,000 foreigners on the Government side. Of these auxiliaries, some 2,000 are Russians—largely generals and technicians, and the remainder is an omnium gatherum of adventurers of all sorts of nationalities. One of the main objections to the French plan of a "token" withdrawal is that the French Government is anxious to take into account the ratio of foreigners on each side. In short, M. Corbin wants, say, three Italians to be withdrawn from General Franco's army for every one on the side of the Government. At best, the Italians and the Germans might be prepared to agree—"in principle"—to a man-for-man withdrawal. At worst, they will agree to nothing; for they both seem to be determined on no account to allow the Spaniards to fight their war to a finish by themselves.

The issue has ceased long since to be a struggle between two groups of Spaniards, or even of a struggle between two opposing "ideologies" in the Peninsula. Let the facts be faced. The protagonists are not "Reds" and "Whites," anarchy and religion, even Communism and Fascism. In the final analysis they are Italy and the British Commonwealth of Nations. France is on Britain's side because she is trying almost in desperation to maintain the principles of democracy for which her people have made so many heavy sacrifices, and she realises that if Signor Mussolini should succeed in his designs all human liberty would become endangered. The Duce's attitude towards the Spaniards is like that of the Walrus towards the oysters in Lewis Carroll's verse:

> "I weep for you," the Walrus said,
> "I deeply sympathise";
> With sobs and tears he sorted out
> Those of the largest size,
> Holding his pocket-handkerchief
> Before his streaming eyes.

He needs Spain in order to transform the Mediterranean into an Italian lake. If he can retain control of the Balearic Islands, as well as of the South-East Coast of Spain, he will be able to dictate terms not only to Great Britain, but also to France; for without free access to North Africa by sea the French General Staff would be at the mercy of the Germans in the event of another war. The success of Signor Mussolini's policy would be fatal to both the Western democracies—that is why the British programme of re-armament has been accelerated so rapidly. The British Government, as well as the British people, is desperately anxious to exhaust every possible source of agreement; and its apparent complacency in face of Signor Mussolini's taunts has been due to a sincere desire for peace. Neither Britain nor France, however, could tolerate Italian control in Spain. Every other consideration is subordinate to this major issue. It is a matter on which, when all is said and done, compromise is impossible.

A Modern Alchemist

The search for the Philosopher's Stone has known no more distinguished explorer than the late Lord Rutherford, whose death yesterday at the comparatively early age of 66 years will be universally regretted. In the course of his life he exploded many notions by which the science of physics had been persistently retarded; but there is some irony in the fact that he probably will be remembered as the man who exploded the atom. For generations it was believed fervently that the break-up of the atom into its component parts would liberate sufficient energy to enable humanity to return to that life of paradisial laziness from which it had been debarred by the disobedience of Adam and Eve. It was a cruel blow to those hopes when Lord Rutherford bluntly stated that they were based upon nothing more substantial than moonshine. Instead of atoms and molecules—which formed the basis of the Natural Philosophy of a couple of generations ago, and of the Physiography of the schooldays of those still young—Lord Rutherford gave the disappointed world an entirely new system of protons and electrons. Like the fleas that "have little fleas, to bite 'em," Lord Rutherford demonstrated that the atom was, in fact, a miniature universe, with its own arrangement of attractions and repulsions. Within that little universe tendencies to repel were as strong as tendencies to unite, and all the characteristics of the wider world of humanity were discoverable in the inanimate atomic structure. By the bombardment of the atom Lord Rutherford, it may be, shattered the hope of mankind for the life of ease to which it aspired, but he may have opened a great new era from which science has yet to extract the benefit. He did end definitely the adventure, fatuous as it may have been in the scientific mind, but fructifying to the mind of the poet, which had as its end the discovery of the Philosopher's Stone, when he said that in radium might be found all that had been desired. Of his work in connection with radio-activity, only those who themselves have taken a share in it can speak with authority, and in this we are happy to know that an Irishman has borne a noble part. Probably only a few people will have the desire, even if they have the financial resources, to float in the element known as heavy water, which, apparently, anybody with the curiosity and the necessary electrical current can make at leisure. When it has been made the venturesome experimenter can float in a new medium and meditate upon the demolition of the transmutation of the baser metals into gold. In this also Lord Rutherford was the administrator of a cold douche to human ambition. That the baser metals could be transmuted into gold he proved conclusively; but that the transmutation might be the means of enriching the world he derided. When his experiments had been brought to an end he discovered that gold could be made only from a far more costly metal, and then only in such minute quantities that they were invisible to the naked eye. Another broad avenue of dream had been discovered to be a blind-alley. In all this it may seem as if Lord Rutherford had spent ~~his life~~ in exploding fallacies as well as atoms, but in so doing he opened up vistas which had been unknown and unimagined before his time. Many brightly-coloured balloons had been pricked, but in their stead had been placed a galaxy of ascertained facts upon which science may gaze with advantage in the future. In the person of Lord Rutherford the mind of man had widened as Tennyson would have had it: the vision had been extended towards new horizons which generations yet to be will find alluring. In a life of arduous research which extended through many lands he followed "the golden heresy of truth," so that the boy who played pranks with his schoolmaster in the New Zealand city of Nelson became himself the honoured schoolmaster of the scientific world.

Local Talent

The concentration of creative talent in capital cities is one of the problems of modern days. In the great days of painting and sculpture it was in the little towns that the arts flourished—the Florence to which the world still gazes in wondering admiration was something like Bray or Birr in our day. When Sir William Rothenstein calls for local opportunities for artists he voices a need that has long awaited a champion of his standing in the artistic world. He speaks as one who, born a provincial, never has lost touch with the provinces; as one who has been a provincial, as well as a metropolitan, teacher of art. When he speaks of young students from the provincial towns of England losing their artistic souls in London his words are no less applicable to the Irish provincial who takes up an abode in Dublin. The temptations and dangers to artistic integrity scarcely can be eliminated, and it will always be the endeavour of the more gifted and eager children to profit from the teaching of the metropolitan schools, whether they be located in Dublin or Paris, London or Rome. The career of Sir William Rothenstein himself is an excellent example of the benefits to be derived from the system which he deplores. Art is not to be confined within parochial, or even within national, boundaries, and it may be doubted whether there is any example of a local art that continues to flourish independently of wider contacts. Village artists and craftsmen have the local spirit and work in local materials, but they are refreshed continuously in their inspiration by outside influences. When Sir William Rothenstein suggests that encouragement of local talent should begin in the village he makes a suggestion which every art lover would desire. Whether it can be put into effective operation is another matter. How many Irish villages have it in them to furnish the inspiration and the materials for arts and crafts? Something might be done with wood and iron and stone—there is an abundance of material awaiting development, and the demand from the Churches might be sufficient to maintain small groups of craftsmen. The painter and sculptor have no such immediate demand, but a demand might be worked up slowly until it became of economic importance. The hope for local artists must come in this country from local art galleries, and for this alone the novement in Limerick is welcome.

Taming the Bulrush

For a number of years American business men have been contemplating the great swamps of Florida with a far-off, yet purposeful, look in their eyes. The swamps produce an inexhaustible supply of giant bulrushes, and nothing else. Now, where nature yields a "giant" product in inexhaustible, but apparently useless, quantities, America's business men are not going to sit back and mourn her lack of commercial acumen. They are going to relegate nature to the far-distant background, and see what they can do about the problem themselves. Ordinarily it takes them forty-eight hours to conceive a purpose for the product, and slightly longer to convince the American public of its need for the commodity; but, in the case of the bulrushes, there has been an extensive time-lag between discovery and development. Anybody who looks at a giant bulrush will understand the reason for the delay. A bulrush is a bulrush, and there is virtually nothing that the human race can do with it or about it. Mostly the human race comes into contact with bulrushes on picnics, and on these occasions numerous bulrushes are picked, but almost at once the bulrush wins. The picker, in the first moments, slashes at his friends with the excitingly heavy head. At this point he may be said to perceive a future enlivened to a previously unknown pitch of general pleasure by the possession of bulrushes; but this early frenzy quickly dims and eventually dies. The bulrush starts to fall to pieces, the only thing to do seems to be to pick another one, and yet from now on all that will happen will be a tedious reiteration of the slashing and of the bulrush's decay. There is one further use for the bulrush. An armful may be gathered with which to decorate the home. Here again, however, the bulrush is going to fail to live up to its promise, because nobody, after one hour, likes to look at bulrushes any more. Such was the problem presented by the swamps of Florida, and such was the problem that now has been solved. Florida will stick the hairs from the bulrush head on to a leather backing, and deluge the fur coat market with the possibly loathsome result. The bulrush, however, will have been put in its proper place—in the service, not the provocation, of man.

SELF HELP IN COTTON TRADE

In an editorial article The Times observes to-day:—A new starting point for the reorganisation of the cotton industry is provided by the proposals of the Joint Committee of Cotton Trade Organisations, which are made public to-day. The Joint Committee puts in the forefront of its proposals an enabling bill. The suggestion is that the Government should sponsor a measure to facilitate the introduction of schemes of reorganisation directed towards greater efficiency, reduction of cost, elimination of redundant capacity and wasteful competition, in order to develop export trade.

The bill would establish a Cotton Industry Board, representative of all sections of the industry and of the operatives, but appointed by the President of the Board of Trade. It is not clear if this appointed Board is to be permanent or if it would yield place in time to elected representatives. Appointment undoubtedly avoids difficulties at the outset which elections might invite. The Cotton Industry Board's main function would be to watch over and assist the development of the export trade, and to this end market research and propaganda are two specified means. It would also consider schemes of reorganisation submitted by sections of the industry, with particular regard to their probable effect on the export trade and on the relations of the sections of the industry to each other. No such scheme could be approved unless it had the approval of a substantial majority of the section directly concerned, and unless all other sections had had full opportunity of considering it.

The industry alone can give the scheme life and vigour, proceeds The Times. There is no intention of creating a monopoly. The cotton industry can only flourish if it has a large and profitable export trade. As the Joint Committee says in the document submitting the plan, the industry cannot hope to create a monopoly. The essential condition of re-organisation in Lancashire is that it should enable the cotton industry to maintain and improve its competitive power in world markets, and the Committee makes the self-evident affirmation that no genuine expansion of the export trade is possible unless production generally is on a firm economic basis. In other words, Lancashire cannot afford to export at a loss indefinitely. That is a necessary word of admonition to the industry, but the tenor of the Joint Committee's report is optimistic and not in the least down-hearted. Yet all depends on whether self help in Lancashire is, or is not, construed as organised and collective self help. That is the principle of the Joint Committee's carefully balanced proposals. No other principle will suffice.

LONDON LETTER

HOMELESS VOLUNTEERS

59 FLEET STREET, LONDON,
TUESDAY NIGHT.

THE meeting of the Non-Intervention Sub-Committee this evening found Mr. Eden in the chair of this body for the first time, and though the reason for the absence of Lord Plymouth, who had to be in Wales to receive the Duke and Duchess of Kent at his home, was a perfectly good one, it is thought that it was deemed advisable for the Foreign Secretary himself to take the chair on such an important occasion. This evening's meeting was looked upon as a critical one, and the general opinion is that when the full Committee meets it will be faced with some conclusions which may prove acceptable only to a small majority. At the present moment the position bristles with difficulties, but it will not be until the question of getting volunteers out of Spain becomes a practical issue that a dangerous situation will fully develop. It is possible that neither the Spanish Government nor General Franco will willingly give up one of their volunteers. The Spanish Government is faced with the fact that there are thousands of its volunteers who will find it difficult to name a country to which they can be sent if they have to leave Spain. There are anti-Fascists and anti-Nazis in its armies who certainly will not wish to return to their native lands.

Italy's Capital Levy

In the City to-day it was the opinion that the Italian capital levy is unlikely to effect the British investor, as there are few British companies domiciled in Italy of any great importance, apart from Snia Viscosa, manufacturers of rayon, who have a working arrangement with Courtaulds. In many quarters of late there have been speculations as to the financial position of Italy, in view of her engagements in Abyssinia and Northern Africa generally, and the capital levy to some degree may be taken as an answer, since the money is required to pay for the war in Abyssinia and for the rearmament programme. It is estimated that the amount realised will be about forty million pounds.

Collapse on Wall Street

The sudden crash of the Stock Markets on Wall street yesterday and to-day came as a great surprise to the Stock Exchange here. Though City men received the news with a stoicism bred by familiarity, there was considerable anxiety, since the collapse followed upon a day when London, Paris and Amsterdam had all turned better, buyers believing the crisis to be a thing of the past. The Wall street slump is the biggest single session break for seven years, and it is remarkable that it has not a bigger effect here. Prices were marked down in all directions, but mainly as a measure of precaution, dealers reporting that there was little disposition to sell. In the circumstances doubts about the settlement on Thursday have revived, and it is feared that there may be some minor failures.

King Boris Incognito

King Boris of Bulgaria is to travel incognito when he leaves Sofia this week on a visit to Paris, Berlin, London and other European countries. He will be known as Count Rilski. King Boris for several years has paid a private visit in the autumn to Scotland for a rest, and always stayed a day or two at Balmoral, but this year the Court will be in London. On this occasion, however, the King has a State reason for his visit, as he desires to get the Powers to agree to the legalisation of the Bulgarian Army, which, under the terms of the Treaty of Neuilly, must not exceed more than twenty thousand men voluntarily enrolled. The King is now a dictator, a position thrust upon him three years ago after a coup d'etat by a group of military men and politicians, when all political parties were abolished. A movement has just been started to call upon him to restore parliamentary government, but this matter will have to await his return to Sofia.

A New Film Bill

The Film Bill, to be presented by the Government next session, which will introduce new film quotas, is now being drafted, and it will follow in effect the proposals contained in a White Paper issued last June. Opposition to the measure is expected, but the Board of Trade, responsible for the bill is satisfied that its proposals will meet all requirements, and that the measure will foster the British film industry and stimulate the making of films in this country by United States firms. One important point in the bill is that the system known as blind booking, whereby an exhibitor is compelled to rent a number of films more or less of poor quality as a condition of obtaining an important feature film, will be made an offence. The quota regulations will be revised, and instead of as at present being twenty per cent. each for the renter and exhibitor, it will be decreased for the first year to 15 per cent. for the renter and 10 per cent. for the exhibitor, but afterwards these quotas will rise by degrees to 20 per cent. and 15 per cent. respectively.

The Silent Raid

Twenty years ago to-night London experienced its greatest air raid of the War, generally known as the "silent raid." Eleven airships, the biggest group to make an attack, came from Germany. One, the L 45, passed over Central London, while others were over the suburbs. The L 45 dropped seven bombs on the West End, killing 31 people and injuring 47, while great damage was caused to shops and houses, Swan and Edgars, the great store in Piccadilly Circus, suffering severely. London was saved from worse effects by the weather, as a gale was blowing at a very high altitude, and most of the great airships were blown out of their course, only one or two getting back to Germany. It speaks volumes for the need of adequate air defence when it is remembered that on that occasion searchlights and guns were of little use, and that not one of the seventy-three pilots who went up in aeroplanes to fight the Zeppelins were given machines capable of reaching the heights attained by the invaders. All that London knew of the affair was that tremendous explosions took place every few seconds, followed by the sound of falling glass in all directions, and then a dead silence lasting for hours.

DUCHESS LAUNCHES CRUISER

The Duchess of Gloucester, who, with the Duke, yesterday made a brief tour of the West Country, launched H.M.S. Gloucester, a new £1,750,000 cruiser, at Devonport Dockyard. Fifty thousand people watched the ceremony.

UNIVERSITY OF DUBLIN

The Senate of the University of Dublin will meet in the Theatre of Trinity College to-day at 2 p.m., for the purpose of conferring degrees.

RELINQUISHES COMMAND

It was announced in last night's London Gazette that Colonel H. D. McCarthy-O'Leary has relinquished his appointment as Commander of the 158th—Royal Welch—Infantry Brigade, Territorial Army. He was appointed to the command in 1933.

A native of County Cork he served throughout the war, was wounded, mentioned in dispatches and received the D.S.O. and M.C.

FRENCH PLAN FOR SPAIN IN DANGER

RUSSIA, GERMANY AND ITALY DISAGREE ON IT

INCONCLUSIVE TALKS AT LONDON CONFERENCE

MR. EDEN SPEAKS OF A SERIOUS SITUATION

DEADLOCK threatened to grip the Sub-Committee of the Non-Intervention Committee when it ended its meeting at the Foreign Office, London, last night, after several hours discussion.

One more effort is to be made to-day to reach agreement on what Mr. Eden termed a serious situation, when the Sub-Committee meets again to try to smooth out their differences or to find a way of compromise.

In British diplomatic circles it is feared that the gap is too wide to bridge, and that only disappointment will come.

Again and again Mr. Eden, the Foreign Secretary, who presided, had to intervene in the discussion to ask the delegates to keep to the point, which was the French five-point plan for dealing with foreign intervention in Spain.

Summing up before the adjournment, Mr. Eden declared that no service would be done by endeavouring to conceal the fundamental divergence of views which had already been shown. The only glimmer of hope, he said, was that the Portuguese and Soviet Governments were agreed that all war material ought to be stopped from going to Spain as part of an enhanced scheme of control.

Through its representative, M. Maisky, the Soviet Government expressed the opinion that the French plan amounted to a continuation of "so-called non-intervention," which had restricted only the legitimate Government of Spain. The acceptance of these proposals, he said, created an opportunity for further endless discussion, under the cover of which the supply to the rebels of arms and men will continue.

Mr. Eden will make a full report on the situation to the British Cabinet when it meets at 10 Downing street this morning. The Prime Minister was informed last night of the outcome of the talks.

Informal consultations between the representatives may take place before to-day's meeting in the hope of finding a solution.

Britain and France still stand by the plan.

Dr. Woermann, the German representative, did not, it is gathered, seem at all happy at the trend of yesterday's discussion.

BACK TO THE BRITISH PLAN

When the meeting opened Mr. Eden briefly explained its purpose, and M. Corbin, the French Ambassador, said that he had nothing further to add to his Government's proposals, neither had he any further explanations to make.

Count Grandi then sprang his surprise on the meeting. He said that there were no difficulties in regard to procedure, but there were difficulties in substance. He then suggested that the Committee should revert to the British plan of last July, which he declared was an excellent one, adding that he did not think the French plan was any improvement upon it.

The British plan, he said, represented a considerable measure of agreement. He, therefore, thought that the British plan should again come before the Committee, and in order that Italy might not be accused of dilatoriness he would suggest that this should be done.

Mr. Eden interposed to point out that there was no great divergence between the British and French plans. In fact the five points in the French proposals were very largely based on the original British plan.

M. Corbin said that he thought that their proposals should be taken at their intrinsic value.

CHAIRMAN INTERVENES

There was a considerable amount of give and take between Count Grandi and M. Corbin as to how far the French five point plan represented the British plan, and Count Grandi in the course of this argument urged the importance of a renewed discussion of the British proposals.

Mr. Eden rose to make another effort to bring the meeting back to the purpose for which it was called. He pointed out that they had met in order that the delegates present might give the views of their respective Governments on the proposals contained in the French plan.

Then the Portuguese Ambassador, for nearly thirty minutes, gave a historical review of the course of events both in Spain and in the Non Intervention Committee. His speech was to a large extent directed towards the Soviet representative, and he also made a heavy attack on the Nyon agreement, which, he said, acted unfairly in favour of the Valencia Government, because it had apparently made it unhealthy for General Franco's ships to attack Valencia ships.

He spoke at length upon the desirability of granting belligerent rights to General Franco at an early date, and added that the Portuguese Government would be prepared to reinstate control on their own land frontier, provided that the French Government would be prepared to restore control on the Pyrenees.

SOVIET POINT OF VIEW

After the Portuguese Ambassador had ended, Mr. Eden pointed out that although he could say a great deal in reply, the moment was not one for controversy, and once again he reminded the meeting of its purpose.

Herr Woermann, German delegate, then gave his warm support to the Italian proposal for a return to the British plan.

Short speeches by representatives of Czechoslovakia, Belgium and Sweden in support of the French proposals were followed by the speech of M. Maisky.

The point of view put forward by M. Maisky represented the exact position taken up by Russia last July.

Mr. Eden said that he thought at that point he should try and sum up the position. The Belgian, Czechoslovakian and Swedish Governments were substantially in agreement with the five points. The Portuguese Government had subjected the proposals to detailed criticism, and the only glimmer of hope at that moment was that the Portuguese and Soviet Governments were agreed that all war material ought to be stopped from going to Spain as part of an enhanced scheme of control.

More long discussions then took place as to how far the five points belonged to the original British plan.

POSITION OUTLINED

After another thirty minutes there was an adjournment for a quarter of an hour to enable the delegates to discuss with one another and Mr. Eden.

At the end of the adjournment Mr. Eden outlined the position. He pointed out that all the answers given to the French plan were not the same. For instance, the Soviet Government had made it clear that they took the view that the granting of belligerent rights must be dependent upon the withdrawal of all volunteers from Spain. The Italian Government, on the other hand, stated that they preferred belligerent rights should be granted before any volunteers had been withdrawn, although they were willing to submit that point to the two parties of the conflict in Spain.

STILL SERIOUS

Mr. Eden said that he appreciated the good-will shown in endeavouring to reach agreement, but he thought that there was no service whatsoever done in concealing the fundamental divergence of views which had already been shown.

The question still remained how to bridge the gap of last July. The present situation was a serious one, and it was not, in his view, a right or wise thing to adjourn sine die that night without reaching agreement.

He thought that the Committee ought to adjourn until Wednesday, and it was agreed to meet again then at 3.30 p.m. in the hope that in the intervening time some method could be found of getting the Governments, who are at present so divided, a little closer together.

Mr. Eden will again preside to-day.

No comment was made at the meeting on the announcement made from Italy on Monday that there are 40,000 Italians now assisting in Spain.

"Token" withdrawals from Spain were touched upon at the meeting, but they were not discussed.

"A WORTHLESS POLICY"

THE SOVIET VIEW

At the outset of his speech M. Maisky said measures adopted by the Committee had created restrictions only in supplies for the Spanish Government.

"The proposals now presented by the French Government amount in substance to the continuation of the same policy of so-called non-intervention without creating any guarantee whatever of its greater efficacy in the future, and without providing for any effective control over the fulfilment of obligations.

"The acceptance of these proposals creates, however, an opportunity for further endless discussion in the Committee, under the cover of which the supply to the rebels of arms and men will continue.

NO RESPONSIBILITY

"I am authorised by my Government to declare that it regrets that, in view of the foregoing, it cannot take upon itself in the slightest degree the responsibility for such a policy which has already proved to a sufficient extent its worthlessness, and which at the same time, has detrimentally and iniquitously reacted upon the interests of the Spanish people in its legitimate Government.

"If the French, British and other Governments consider it necessary to continue this policy, and still entertain some belief in the possibility of its successes, the Soviet Government does not intend to create for these other Governments any difficulties with regard to such a policy, but declines any responsibility for same.

EVACUATION WELCOMED

"The proposal contained in the second paragraph of the French plan seems to the Soviet Government unclear and inadequate, but it agrees to examine the question of belligerent rights after the final evacuation of all non-Spanish elements taking part in the military operations.

"The Soviet Government would welcome the immediate evacuation of a considerable

CHINESE LOSE GROUND

FIERCE BATTLE IN SHANGHAI

NANKING RAIDED AGAIN

OMINOUS CALM ON SHANTUNG FRONT

PRESS ASSOCIATION FOREIGN SPECIAL TELEGRAM.

SHANGHAI, Tuesday.

REINFORCEMENTS are being poured in by the Chinese military commanders to attempt to check any further Japanese advance in the fierce battle to the south of the Woosung Creek—just north of Shanghai—where the Japanese centre is making another bid to break through to Tachang.

The Chinese admit that the Japanese re-occupied to-day the ruined village of Kechia Pailou, from which they had been ousted yesterday.

Further to the South, on their right wing, the Chinese claim to have made a successful counter-attack and crossed the Shanghai-Woosung railway.

Another attempt by the Japanese to land troops at Paimoukou, on the Yangtse, forty-five miles north-west of Shanghai, is believed to be imminent. Their warships off Paimoukou have carried out a heavy bombardment of the Chinese positions.

CHINESE FORCES

The Japanese Army spokesman here to-night estimated that there were now fifty-five Chinese divisions, averaging 10,000 men apiece, in the triangle formed by Shanghai, Hangchow and Nanking.

It is announced that 2,057 non-combatants were killed and 2,955 injured in the International Settlement up to Friday last as a result of misdirected bombs, shells and bullets, compared with 71 killed and 216 injured in the 1932 hostilities.

The official Chinese newsagency says that three Japanese 'planes to-day machine-gunned two cars near Soochow, in which were three foreigners and one Chinese on their way to Nanking from Shanghai.

The four occupants dashed out and took cover when they saw the 'planes pursuing them. No one was injured. The cars were riddled with bullets.

REINFORCEMENTS FOR BIG PUSH

Three thousand more Japanese troops arrived at Shanghai to-day, according to Chinese reports. They are described as "the first contingent of a fresh division ordered to Shanghai because of the failure of four big Japanese offensives."

Nanking was again raided by Japanese 'planes, which concentrated on the aerodrome. They also aimed bombs at the train ferry and at Pukow, the railway terminus across the river, where big fires were started.

The Japanese also paid their first visit to Hankow for nearly a month. They claim to have damaged 15 aeroplanes at Nanking and 31 at Hankow.

SHANTUNG STORM EDGE

TOKYO, Tuesday.

Ominous calm prevails on the Shantung front, the eastern area of the North China battlefields.

The Domei Agency says that the Japanese will certainly cross the Yellow River before long, but they are wondering whether General Han Fu-chu, the powerful Governor of Shantung, will greet them as friend or foe. Since he became Governor in 1930 he has been generally friendly to the Japanese, but he has repeatedly pledged loyalty to General Chiang Kai-shek, the Chinese Prime Minister.

Some of the Shantung troops are notoriously anti-Japanese, and have established a close connection with the Central Government troops. There are also troops of the Central Government in Shantung under General Yu Hsuch-chung, who has been earnestly pressing General Han to join in the war.

THE CONFERENCE

The Rome Correspondent of the Asahi Shimbun, having interviewed "leaders of the Italian Government," reports that Italy has decided to uphold Japan's action against Communist influences, and "will attend the Brussels Conference if Japan so desires."

"It would not be a bad idea," says the Asahi, "to take part in the Conference, where Germany, Italy and Portugal will support Japan and attack the anti-Japanese atmosphere. Indeed, this should rather be Japan's duty."

According to Japanese information, large quantities of arms and ammunition for China are being unloaded at Haiphong, in French Indo-China, whence they are taken, via Hanoi, to Lungchow, in South-west Kwangsi, at the rate of 100 waggon-loads daily.

The Japanese report gives the following figures of munitions recently delivered at Haiphong for China:—178 tons of aeroplanes and 432 tons of aeroplane materials, 490,000 rifles, 17,300 revolvers, 12,400 machine-guns, 27,300,000 rounds of ammunition, 132,100,000 rounds of machine-gun ammunition and 250,000 rounds for revolvers, 170,000 tear-gas bombs, 370,000 hand grenades, 510 cases of shells, 163 tons of dynamite, 15,630 gas masks, 63 fish torpedoes, 9,735 tons of barbed wire.

JAPANESE SURROUNDED

The Chinese and Japanese forces in the region of Yuanping (North Shansi) are hurriedly preparing for a major battle, which will, it is thought, decide the fate of Shansi Province. Although the Chinese troops have the Japanese surrounded, the latter are desperately fighting to break through.

It is generally thought that the Japanese advance from the North down the Peiping-Hankow and Tientsin-Pukow Railways will shortly be halted to enable them to consolidate their gains, and establish independent administrations in North China, with the intention of presenting the Conference of signatories of the Nine-Power Pact in Brussels with a fait accompli.

Any attempt to advance further South will, it is claimed, bring them to well-prepared Chinese defences, manned by Central Government troops, who are expected to offer a much stiffer resistance than the Japanese have so far met in North China.

MR. CORDELL HULL VISITING CANADA

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

WASHINGTON, Tuesday.

Mr. Cordell Hull, the Secretary of State, has left on a short visit to Ottawa and Toronto.

UNREST IN PALESTINE

SITUATION NOW EASIER

JERUSALEM CURFEW RESCINDED

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

JERUSALEM, Tuesday.

FOLLOWING the most peaceful night which Palestine has had since the outbreak of the present troubles, the curfew order in Jerusalem, which came into force on October 15, was rescinded to-day.

This indicates that the authorities regard the situation as having greatly improved.

The Government's warnings to the villages and the stringent punitive measures taken to demonstrate to lawless elements the futility of persisting in their activities probably contributed to bringing about a more peaceful atmosphere.

The only incident last night was half an hour's fusillade at the southernmost Jewish colony in the Shephaleh Plain. Here the attackers retreated after verey lights had brought police reinforcements to the spot.

POLICE DOGS

Police dogs (South African Dobermanns) are being effectively used to track down law-breakers.

Precautionary measures by the authorities include police guards on trains, each coach carrying a British constable armed with a rifle.

The Armenian who was shot in a Jerusalem main street died to-day. He was a poverty-stricken street photographer. Three houses were blown up to-day at Daharia, near Hebron, as punishment for the attack on the police station yesterday, when a band of Arabs compelled the local police, believed to be Arabs, to give up arms and ammunition.

A detachment of the Black Watch surrounded the village at dawn to-day, and the police entered and demanded the missing rifles.

When these were not forthcoming expert searchers made a thorough inspection, in which they had the co-operation of women searchers, a favourite device of the Arabs being to rely on the "untouchability" of their womenfolk to conceal arms and ammunition.

HOUSES BLOWN UP

The search was fruitless, and sappers blew up three houses, and the troops then withdrew.

Punitive measures adopted by the authorities include a fine of £2,000, the collection of which has already been begun by the villages in the shape of corn, live-stock and other movables.

It has been ordered that thirty male peasants must report themselves at Hebron daily.

A number of houses have been marked for demolition corresponding to the number of rifles stolen. For every rifle that is returned one house will be exempted.

Following a police search at the village of Lifta, near Jerusalem, three villagers, described as bad offenders, have been arrested. It was from Lifta that the Arab came who was killed by his own bomb in attempting to attack a Jewish 'bus in the suburbs of Jerusalem last week. The village was notorious in the troubles in 1933 and 1936.

NEW ARAB HIGHER COMMITTEE

A new Arab Higher Committee is being formed in Syria, according to reports from Arab sources in Jerusalem. It will comprise the refugee members of the old Committee, with the addition of five Arab Nationals from Irak, Egypt, Syria and the Lebanon who attended the Arab Congress at the village of Bloudan, near Damascus, in September.

(The Arab Higher Committee in Jerusalem was recently declared an unlawful association.)

The remaining members of the Supreme Moslem Council have agreed to co-operate with the new Wakf Endowment Fund Commission, whose appointment was announced yesterday.

The new Commission is to manage the Moslem Religious Endowment Trust, the control of which was taken away from the former Moslem Committee on Saturday.

A member of the Supreme Council told the Press Association to-day that, provided the Commission does not interfere with the religious affairs of the Moslems, but confines itself to the financial administration of the Trust, the Council will be willing to co-operate.

A train from Haifa to Egypt narrowly escaped serious damage to-day, it is reported, when a land mine was detected on the permanent way near Gaza.

The explosives were removed, and the train proceeded on its way.

Neusel Wins on Points

Lydon's Successful Debut

Walter Neusel (Germany) defeated Maurice Strickland (New Zealand) on points in a heavy-weight contest at Wembley Stadium last night. The verdict was very unpopular, the crowd booing for several minutes afterwards. His strength and heavy body punches gave Neusel victory over a cleverer and faster boxer. Strickland was down for a count of five in the last round.

Dominic Lydon, former Irish amateur heavy-weight champion, won his first fight as a professional by knocking out Tiny Woodhouse, of Croydon, in the third round.

FUTURE OF NORTH AFRICA

SPECIAL POWERS FOR FRENCH MINISTER

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

PARIS, Tuesday.

France will be represented at the Far East Conference in Brussels by M. Delbos, the Foreign Minister, and M. de Tessan, Under Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs. This was one of several important decisions taken at a meeting of the Council of Ministers to-day.

Special powers were granted to M. Sarraut, Minister of Colonies, in a decree signed by President Lebrun, to take such measures as he might consider necessary for the control and co-ordination of France's North African possessions and protectorates.

Lord Nuffield has given away another £50,000. This time it is for the Sea Cadet Corps of the Navy League. The gift was announced by Lord Lloyd, who presided at the annual dinner of the League in London last night, at which Lord Nuffield was present.

Ministers' Salaries and Pensions

No Question of Wholesale Increases

Committee May Not Report For A Month

BY OUR POLITICAL CORRESPONDENT

THERE will be a further meeting of the Committee on Ministers' Salaries and Pensions at Leinster House to-day. This, I am informed, will not by any means be the final meeting of the Committee. There will be at least three or four other meetings, and it is not expected that the report will be available for at least a month.

As to figures which have been published purporting to indicate the recommendations of the Committee, it can be definitely said that no decisions have yet been reached.

Certain sums have been put forward in a tentative way for the purposes of debate, but that is all. These have elicited diverse views for and against, as they were intended to do, and the debates are continuing. If, as seems to be the case, some people are apprehensive that the Committee will recommend wholesale increases, and that for this purpose all parties are joining together to enable Ministers and ex-Ministers to "batten" on the community, it can be said that such fears are without justification. In any case, the Committee can only make recommendations to the Dail. That body will make the final decision. In the event of the Committee's recommendations being unanimous, it will facilitate the Dail in its work, but if not the full responsibility will rest with the Dail.

The first paragraph of the terms of reference to the Committee is concerned only with the salaries of the existing President of the Executive Council, Ministers, Parliamentary Secretaries, the Speaker and Deputy Speaker. It is recalled that in the estimates for the current year sums equivalent to those paid to members of the Cosgrave Government were voted by the Dail. Mr. de Valera intimated in the Dail in February last that while this was the case it was not intended that they should receive these amounts until after the general election. It is, therefore, assumed that since July 1, the date of the election, Ministers have been receiving payment at the higher rate which is as follows:—President of the Executive Council, £2,500 (formerly £1,500); Ministers and Speaker, £1,700 (£1,000); Deputy Speaker, £1,000 (£750); Attorney-General, £2,500 (£1,500). These rates will probably continue until the advent of the new Constitution on December 29, when the new scale will operate.

HEAD OF THE STATE

The Committee are asked to make recommendation as to the remuneration of the Uachtaran, or Head of the State. In this connection comparisons will, no doubt, be made with the salary formerly given to the Governor-General, and account will be taken of the social duties which the new official will be expected to undertake. They will also make recommendations as to the payment of pensions or gratuities to former holders of Ministerial office. In this connection it will be necessary to fix a reasonable period of office as well as a reasonable amount for the proposed beneficiaries.

It is noted that in the terms of reference there is no direct mention of deputies or Senators, but it is thought that a paragraph which says "any other matter that the Committee may consider associated with the foregoing" will afford them an opportunity of expressing their views as to whether these may be entitled to any increase of the allowance which deputies receive at present, or which was awarded to members of the former Senate. So far there has been no authoritative hint as to the intention of the Government regarding payment of members of the new Senate, but it would appear to be invidious if they were required to serve without receiving treatment at least equal to that given to deputies.

DEATH OF LORD RUTHERFORD

GREAT MAN OF SCIENCE

THE SPLITTING OF THE ATOM

LORD RUTHERFORD, O.M., the distinguished man of science, whose name is connected with the splitting of the atom, died last night in a nursing home at Cambridge, aged sixty-six. He had been gravely ill after an abdominal operation. On Monday night he was to have undergone a second operation, but in view of his condition his medical attendants concluded that it would be too dangerous.

Lord Rutherford had been Cavendish Professor of Experimental Physics and Director of the Cavendish Laboratory at Cambridge University since 1919. In the laboratory he conducted numerous investigations into radio-activity, and made experiments in transmutation of the elements and in the splitting of the atom. Associated with him in the splitting of the atom was Mr. E. T. S. Walton, a graduate of Dublin University, who since has been elected to a Fellowship of Trinity College, Dublin.

THE WORLD OF ATOMS

Lord Rutherford's world was the world of the infinitely small—the world of atoms, with their still smaller constituent protons and electrons. With unlimited patience he laboured to discover the secrets of this domain of science. He attacked, however, the popular conception of the results to be obtained by the splitting of the atom. "Anyone," he told the British Association at Leicester, in 1933, "who expects a source of power from the transformation of the atom is talking moonshine, but it is enormously interesting to scientists."

Lord Rutherford's aim was, like that of the alchemists of the Middle Ages, the transmutation of elements. With the advance of science the ideas of the alchemists were discarded, and the development of chemistry in the nineteenth century made it clear that the whole of matter could be resolved into elements which appeared to be unchangeable. Then came the discovery that the heaviest elements—uranium and thorium—were undergoing a spontaneous transformation, and this revived the idea of the possibility of the transmutation of elements.

Where the alchemists used weird and wonderful methods which produced little result, however, Lord Rutherford, with all the vast resources of modern science at his disposal, devised experiments by means of which millions of particles were projected at high speed on to the nucleus of an atom in order to change the composition of the atom.

Men had searched for the "philosopher's stone" for thousands of years, he said, in a lecture at Bedford College, and radium came as near to it as anything that could be found. "Modern Alchemy" might well be the popular title for his work, for he showed that it was now possible by modern methods to produce exceedingly minute quantities of gold, but only by the transmutation of an even more costly element—platinum. Lord Rutherford added: "The amount of transformation is usually on a minute scale, and only rarely is the matter produced either visible or weighable. In the case of gold, the gold is not visible."

In one lecture at the Royal Institution he demonstrated the secrets of "heavy water" made from "heavy hydrogen"—hydrogen with an atomic nucleus twice as heavy as that of ordinary hydrogen—a new weapon for him in his attack on the mysteries of the atom.

HIS CAREER

Lord Rutherford was born at Nelson, New Zealand, in 1871, and was educated at various colleges there, and at the New Zealand University, before he entered Cambridge University to take degrees with first class honours in mathematics and physics, as a prelude to his connection with Trinity College, Cambridge, and his noteworthy research work at the Cavendish Laboratory. In 1904 he was appointed Professor of Physics at McGill University, Canada.

A pioneer of wireless telegraphy, Lord Rutherford showed, as long ago as 1902, that wireless communication was possible between a station and a moving train. He returned to England from Canada in 1907 as Langworthy Professor of Physics at Manchester University. Two years later he was awarded the Nobel Prize in Chemistry. He was honoured by many universities and learned societies. He was knighted in 1914; received the honour of the Order of Merit in 1925, and was raised to the Peerage in 1931. He was for five years President of the Royal Society, and when he held that position in 1930 he spoke by wireless telephone from his residence in Cambridge to the members of the Royal Society of Canada, who were assembled for their annual meeting at Montreal. In May, 1931, he became Chairman of the Advisory Council of the Department of Scientific and Industrial Research.

Lord Rutherford's work was recognised in a practical way in 1936, when Lord Austin made a donation of £250,000 in order to build a modern research laboratory at Cambridge and for the purchase of costly apparatus. In that year also Lord Rutherford became Director of the Royal Society Mond Laboratory at Cambridge.

He married in 1900 Miss Mary G. Newton, of Christchurch, New Zealand. There is one child, a daughter, who was married in 1921 to Mr. R. H. Fowler, a lecturer in mathematics at Trinity College, Cambridge.

APPRECIATIONS

Sir Joseph J. Thomson, Master of Trinity College, Cambridge: "His work was so great that it cannot be compassed in a few words. It is one of the greatest losses that has ever occurred to British science."

Sir Oliver Lodge: "I am terribly upset. It is a terrible calamity, a terrible loss for New Zealand, and for the whole world."

A New Abbey Theatre

Larger Building on Present Site

("IRISH TIMES" NEWS.)

WE understand that negotiations which have been in process for some time have now been completed, by which the Abbey Theatre will be changed out of the recognition of those who have known it.

The site has now been secured for an entirely new building, which will take in the entire corner site at the junction of Abbey and Marlborough streets. On this site it is proposed to build a new theatre, complete with all the accommodation for schools which the present Abbey and Peacock Theatres afford, and with all the up-to-date equipment of a first-class theatre.

For some time the space available in the present buildings has been found wholly inadequate, and the accommodation for the players has left much to be desired. In the new theatre not only will there be a considerable increase in the capacity of the auditorium and stage, but the back-stage space will be greatly enlarged. By this enlargement a greater part of the work needed in the productions of plays may be undertaken within the theatre itself.

A small theatre will be retained for the use of the Abbey Theatre School of Acting and for rehearsals, and this little theatre may be used also for experimental productions.

The present Abbey Theatre was opened to the public in December, 1904. Its structure was arranged from the buildings of the old Mechanics' Theatre and the City Morgue, and the structural alterations were completed to the designs of Mr. Joseph Holloway. The necessary financial assistance was furnished by the late Miss A. E. F. Horniman, who is understood to have spent about £10,000 on the building and its equipment.

Some of the money needed for the proposed rebuilding of the Abbey Theatre is likely to come from the United States, where the company is at present on tour.

WALL STREET PANIC

BROKERS RUSH TO UNLOAD

£4,000,000,000 DROP IN VALUES

GOVERNMENT WILL NOT INTERVENE

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

NEW YORK, Tuesday.

SCENES reminiscent of the Wall street crash eight years ago were enacted on the New York Stock Exchange to-day, when, for the second day in succession, a huge selling wave struck the market. Prices toppled from one to thirteen dollars or more, while yelling brokers milled around the trading posts, executing orders in a turmoil of confusion unparalleled since 1929.

At times the shouting of bids and offers was deafening. Once the ticker was 22 mins. behind in its record of trading, and the authorities were forced to put out stock prices on the bond tape. Hollow-eyed clerks had worked all night getting out calls for additional margin.

When the Exchange opened the wildest confusion prevailed, brokers rushing to execute a flood of orders pouring in from all parts of the country.

LOSS ON MARGIN

Blocks of shares totalling from 1,000 to 25,000 each changed hands as the unloading of impaired margin accounts proceeded feverishly.

Board rooms in brokerage houses, deserted for months until the August slump began, were crowded to overflowing as traders sought to protect their accounts from the falling markets. While many investors scanning the ticker tapes appeared deeply anxious over their commitments, veteran brokers said there was less evidence of the fear psychology manifested during the panicky session of recent years.

Early in the afternoon influential heavy buying, largely by investment trusts, stemmed the slump, the market rallying briskly from the day's low records. It finished with gains up to six points and losses up to five points. The total number of shares to change hands was 7,290,000, the highest figure since 1929.

Rumours that the Securities and Exchange Commission was planning to close the Exchange in order to avert the utter demoralisation of trading, helped to create a bearish atmosphere. Information, supposed to emanate from official circles in Washington, however, tended to confirm the belief that the Government would not interfere, failing the occurrence of an actual emergency.

WIRE FROM WASHINGTON

This afternoon Mr. John O'Connor, of New York Chairman of the Rules Committee of the House of Representatives, sent a telegram from Washington to the Governors of the New York Stock Exchange as follows: "You should clean your own house first rather than passing the buck to the Administration. First thing you should do is either stop all short sales or require short gamblers to put up as much margin as legitimate buyers." Mr. O'Connor also wired to the Governors of the Federal Reserve Board: "Respectfully suggest something should be done at once with reference to situation in securities markets. Margin required for purchases should be considerably lowered, and short sales should be stopped or margin greatly increased."

In a statement to the Press Mr. O'Connor asserted that there was no reason why Congress should not watch the situation carefully and "do everything possible to bring about the stabilisation to prevent another crash and prolonged business recession."

£4,000,000,000 DROP

It is computed that since the middle of August the Stock Market collapse has wiped out £4,000,000,000 in stock values.

Wall street banking circles, expressing concern at developments, were inclined to regard it as a symptom of disturbance in the economic structure. It is felt that the market faces an unprecedented situation in the testing of its self-recuperating powers, as under existing Federal regulations any organised supporting action does not appear to be feasible. The hope was expressed, however, that, if the present condition does not correct itself, the Administration may decide to do something to bolster confidence. Meantime, it is not considered that conditions will get so panicky as to call for drastic action.

Washington advices thus far indicate the improbability of any immediate action by the Administration, because it is feared such action might be misrepresented. As one official explained, any step which ordinarily might have a salutary effect in the market would, undoubtedly, produce the opposite effect, if the general public thought the Administration had been "stampeded" into action.

GOVERNMENT PUZZLED

There is little doubt that high Government officials are becoming increasingly puzzled over the markets action, and are searching for new information on its technical and business background. At the same time, as a result of recent events some of the official faith in Government regulation of the entire securities field has, undoubtedly, become slightly dimmed.

President Roosevelt has no intention of exercising his authority to close the New York Stock Exchange, according to official sources at the President's headquarters here.

LONDON AFFECTED

Following the overnight slump on Wall street, London Stock Markets were unsettled yesterday, and many of the leading issues were marked down by substantial amounts.

Industrials suffered severely, and heavy losses occurred in the mining groups. Persistent liquidation in the late dealings caused prices to fall still lower, and the market closed on a dull note.

CANADIAN SLUMP

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

TORONTO, Tuesday.

Canadian markets broke to-day, some issues touching the lowest levels for five years at Montreal following a wave of heavy selling. A smart rally towards the close brought a recovery of 75 per cent. of the day's decline.

The crash, taken together with the United States slump, is viewed here as unaccountable.

REACTIONS IN PARIS

PARIS, Tuesday.

The effects of the Wall Street panic, says The Times Paris Correspondent, were strongly felt on the Paris market to-day. The Bourse was extremely weak, and most securities were marked down, though the volume of selling, apart from Internationals, was not very large. Rentes lost most of the ground gained yesterday, and French Equities, particularly Chemicals and shares in metal-producing companies, lost a good deal of ground. An unfavourable view was also taken of the new Italian tax proposals, the conclusion drawn being that Italy has now been reduced to the straits of openly having to live on her capital.

On the foreign exchange market to-day's events had a totally different effect. The demand for francs increased, and the French Exchange Equalisation Fund was able to acquire a good deal of foreign exchange, in spite of the fact that the news from to-day's Cabinet meeting must be described as unsatisfactory from the financial point of view.

THE TIMOR SEA CROSSED

MISS BATTEN'S BID FOR RECORD

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

BATAVIA, Tuesday.

Miss Jean Batten, the twenty-seven-year-old New Zealand airwoman, to-day completed the first hop of her attempt to break the Australia-England solo flight record of 6 days 8 hours and 25 minutes, set up by Mr. Jim Broadbent in May.

Taking off from Port Darwin at 6 a.m. local time (9.30 p.m. G.M.T.) last night, she landed at Batavia (Java) at 4.45 p.m. local time (9.15 a.m. G.M.T.).

She said that her flight so far had been "moderately good." She intends taking off at dawn to-morrow for Alor Star (Malay Peninsula).

In her flight to-day Miss Batten made the longest sea crossing on her way to England—the 500 odd miles over the Timor Sea.

As a precaution the patrol boat Larrakia was stationed 100 miles out from the Australian coast, while the Dutch Government had seaplanes in readiness for emergency.

Known as the "Try Again Girl," she is flying her reconditioned Percival Gull 'plane in which she made her record England-Australia and Australia-New Zealand flights.

OFF AGAIN

BATAVIA, Wednesday Morning.

Miss Jean Batten resumed her flight to London at two o'clock this morning (local time), her immediate destination being Alor Star, Federated Malay States.

BUILDING TRADE DISPUTE

CORPORATION SERVICE TO BE CONTINUED

Representatives of the Building Trades Group in the Dublin Trades Union Council announced last night that there will be no withdrawal of building trade workers in the Dublin Corporation service to-day.

Negotiations in regard to retrospective payments to the permanent tradesmen and builders' labourers were opened yesterday, and are to be continued. It is expected that a satisfactory settlement will be reached.

The position of other public bodies which have not yet made arrangements for retrospective payments is not clear, but group representatives have indicated that the stoppages in these cases also have been postponed.

A meeting between representatives of the Saorstat Eireann Federation of Building Trades Employers and representatives of the group was held yesterday. It is understood that the setting up of the temporary Area Joint Committee for the industry was discussed at considerable length, and that these discussions will be resumed on Monday next.

In the meantime the position in the plumbing trade continues to give rise to complications, which are not confined entirely to the building trade proper. Yesterday, for instance, the premises of the Alliance and Dublin Consumers' Gas Company were picketed by members of the Plumbers' Union, who are seeking to secure general recognition of their new agreement with the Saorstat Association of Master Plumbers.

The position, in so far as it affects the building trade, is engaging the attention of the group.

LORD HAREWOOD'S IRISH ESTATE

PURCHASE NEGOTIATIONS PROCEEDING

FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.

LOUGHREA, Tuesday.

Negotiations are still taking place between the Earl of Harewood and the Irish Leaseholders' Association regarding the purchase by tenants of 200 premises in Loughrea included in his lordship's Irish estate. The negotiations were referred to by Mr. Hutchinson Davidson, solicitor for the plaintiff, at Loughrea Court to-day, when summonses for non-payment of rent and five ejectment suits against forty-three tenants were again for hearing.

Applying for a further adjournment for two months, Mr. Davidson said that he did not think the Court or anybody else would be troubled with these cases.

Mr. V. P Shields, solicitor for the defendants, consented to the application for adjournment, which was granted.

It shows a most attractive display of butter, eggs, cheese, bacon, hams, lard, tinned milk, cream Carrageen moss, and poultry. A special feature of the latter exhibit is a number of boxes containing 12 milk-fed chickens. Many cows, with yields exceeding two thousand gallons, are on view.

UNEMPLOYMENT IN THE NORTH

CENSURE MOTION IN PARLIAMENT

FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.

BELFAST, Tuesday.

In the Northern Parliament to-day Mr. Thomas Henderson (Ind. U.) moved that, in the opinion of the House, the Government had failed to find a cure for the unemployment evil in Northern Ireland, and deplored that no effective steps had been taken to secure new industries, and that the Government had not secured for Northern Ireland an adequate share of British armament contracts.

He said that there was no Government in any part of the world less fit to govern than the people they had at the head of affairs in Northern Ireland. They had been in office for seventeen years, but unemployment was worse now than it was when they came into power. There were 65,000 people signing on at the Labour Exchanges, and there must be about 100,000 people unemployed altogether in Northern Ireland. The Government was, he said, responsible for this state of affairs. They were even responsible for suicide. "You are the most heartless crew that I ever heard of," he added.

Sir Robert Lynn, Deputy Speaker, said that the hon. member could not use such language.

Mr. Henderson, continuing, said that even the Deputy Speaker in his time described the Government as the most costly in the world, and yet they could do nothing for the working-class. They had been told that Ulster should be made "a garden of flowers," but the only flower that he could see was "the bunch of pansies" on the Government benches. (Laughter.)

Sir Robert Lynn again called the hon. member to order.

Mr. Henderson quoted Mr. W. J. Stewart's speech at Armagh last night, and said that although Mr. Stewart was a supporter of the Government he had stated that quarter of the population of Ulster was unemployed, and that the province would soon resemble a graveyard.

The debate was adjourned.

MOTOR ACCIDENT IN DUBLIN

WOMAN AND CHILD INJURED

Mrs. M. Feeney, of Upper Abbey street, Dublin, and her young son, Gerald, were struck by a motor car at Ormond quay last night and taken to Jervis Street Hospital, where they were detained.

Their injuries, it is stated, are not grave.

POLITICAL STORM IN BRAZIL

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

RIO DE JANEIRO, Tuesday.

General Flores da Cunha, the Governor of the Brazilian State of Rio Grande do Sul, has fled to Uruguay, and President Vargas has decreed "federal intervention" in the State.

General Daltro Filho has been appointed the interventor. Political strife, which has been brewing for some time between the Federal Government and the State of Rio Grande do Sul, reached a climax yesterday, when General Flores da Cunha tendered his resignation.

The Rio Grande police forces were placed under the control of the Federal Government.

ILLNESS OF MR. M. MacLIAMMOIR

Mr. Michael MacLiammoir has, under doctor's orders, been compelled to relinquish the part of Macduff in the Dublin Gate Theatre's production of "Macbeth." His place last night, and for the remaining performances, will be taken by Mr. Reginald Jarman, the well-known London actor, who has come to Dublin at very short notice.

Mr. Jarman, who will probably be best known in Dublin for his playing of Coriolanus at the Abbey Theatre, was with the Gate Theatre Productions on their first visit to Egypt. He and Mr Hilton Edwards began their stage careers almost at the same time, and are very old friends. They played Shakespeare for some time, and appeared together in London and many other cities before the Dublin Gate Theatre was established.

Mr. MacLiammoir, an Irish Times reporter was informed at the Gate last night, has a slight throat infection.

"SWEEP" TICKETS SEIZED

POLICE OFFICERS CHARGED

LAUNDRYMAN SAID TO HAVE TOLD

AT Liverpool yesterday, eighteen men, including three police officers, were charged in connection with an alleged conspiracy to distribute Irish sweepstake tickets between January, 1935, and August, 1937.

P.C. Cartwright said that one of the accused men (Green) used to call at his home for laundry in the St. Saviour's Laundry van. On September 14, 1936, Green said to him at his front door: "There's a right racket going on down at Princes Dock with your fellows. There are thousands of pounds worth of Irish sweepstake tickets being brought across from Dublin daily in suitcases, and your fellows are being paid to allow them to pass through the dock gate."

Witness asked Green what proof he had, and Green said: "For three years up to the beginning of this year I used to carry most of these suitcases myself in the laundry van. I was paid 10!- for each case I took out of the dock. I sometimes made as much as £30 in a week. There are three of your fellows being paid now. I would be in it now only for your fellows."

"GETTING PLENTY"

Witness asked Green how he came to be stopped, and Green replied: "During the time I was carrying these suit cases Ronald and McDonald—two of the accused policemen—were always on me to pay them something of my share. This I refused to do because I knew they were getting plenty. These policemen did all sorts of things to me. Ronald got other policemen to search my van when I had no sweepstake tickets in it. Paterson—another of the accused policemen—on one occasion searched my van. Towards the back-end of last year I was taken off the district by the Mother Superior and put to work in the garden. On inquiring the reason, I was told that it had come to her notice that I had been carrying sweepstake tickets in the laundry van. I went down to the dock and saw McDonald at the gate. I said to McDonald: 'Somebody has been up to the laundry telling of me.' McDonald said: 'It was Ronald who did it.'"

"Green then said, 'Your fellows kicked me out of this, so I feel justified in telling you about it. I will tell you more when I come again.' When Green again called at witness's house he said: "One of the ship's officers, a fellow named Stringer, has charge of the handling of all these suit cases, and is paid by the Irish Hospitals' Trust. The main man here is a fellow named Woodall, who lives in a big house in Wallasey, called Warrenpoint. When I first started to take these cases I used to take them to the railway station, but one of the porters guessed what was in the cases. I told Stringer about this, and he then told me to take them to a house off Almonds Green, West Derby. Woodall's father lived there." Green also said that he put cases into Woodall's house, of which the owner gave him the key.

PAYMENT ALLEGED

Constable Cartwright added that Green called later at his house, and he asked him how the suit cases were generally paid for. Green said: "I generally visited Stringer in his cabin on the ship. He paid me about once a week, sometimes by cheque and sometimes in cash." Asked if he could prove that the police constables were getting paid, Green said: "Shortly after I started taking these cases Stringer asked me to take 16 cases, and said, 'You will not be stopped.' After the cases were packed Stringer said, 'I must go and square Jock.' Stringer then went to the South-East Gate where P.C. McDonald was on duty."

On the last occasion Green came to witness's house he said: "Well it is a funny thing I have been down to the dock and it is going on as strong as ever. I think I will write to the Customs." Witness told Green that it would be very foolish to do that, and Green replied: "All right. I won't bother so long as you say you have reported it."

The hearing was adjourned until to-day.

The National War Memorial

Not Ready for Remembrance Day

It is understood that the new National War Memorial at Island Bridge will not be completed in time for the forthcoming Remembrance Day ceremonies in Dublin.

For this year, at any rate, there will not be any departure from the usual programme, and the ceremony of the two minutes' silence, the sounding of the Last Post, and the laying of wreaths, will take place as in former years, in the Phœnix Park.

ATTACK ON ROOSEVELT

TRAGIC MISTAKES VISUALISED

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

NEW YORK, Tuesday.

"We are faced with a situation where the President may make a mistake that would, indeed, be tragic, and that might lead to war," said Governor Alf Landon in a nation-wide broadcast speech to-day.

He was making his first public statement of party policy since his defeat as Republican candidate in the Presidential election of 1936, and seized the occasion to comment on President Roosevelt's recent declaration on foreign policy.

"The President's impulsive 'quarter-backing' and his readiness to assume the responsibility of one man government in international affairs is far more dangerous than the same tendencies in dealing with domestic matters," Governor Landon declared.

"Rightly we may ask the question the world is asking: How far does he intend to go? He spoke of quarantines, which mean either economic sanctions or blockade.

"Our experience with Italy has proved the ineffectiveness of sanctions and that blockade means war.

"By the time the special session of Congress is convened it is to be hoped the President will have thought out what he proposes to do. Close observers have increasing doubts as to whether the President has thought his recent declaration through to its logical conclusion."

Governor Landon further accused President Roosevelt of "wasting practically the entire 1937 session of Congress in fighting for more power for himself."

The prices per ton paid by shipping merchants in Northern Ireland during the week ended 26th October, 1937, were as follows:—Up-to-Date (Red Soil), bagged £2 5s.; Up-to-Date (Grey Soil), bagged £2 2s. 6d.; Arran Banner, bagged £2 to £2 5s., loose £2; Arran Consul, bagged £2 5s.; Arran Victory, bagged £2 to £2 5s., loose £1 15s. to £2; Kerr's Pink, bagged £2 to £2 5s., loose £1 15s.

TO-DAY IN THE DAIL

CONTROL OF PRICES BILL

DEFENCE PENSIONS SCHEME

BY OUR POLITICAL CORRESPONDENT.

THE Committee stage of the Control of Prices Bill will be taken in the Dail to-day. Other matters likely to be on the Order Paper will include the Presidential Election Bill in Committee, the Imposition of Duties Bill, the Cereals Amendment Bill and some smaller measures. There will be introduced a supplementary estimate for Property Losses Compensation. The Dail will be asked to confirm the Defence Forces Pensions Scheme, which was published recently. In private members' time, the debate on P. McGilligan's motion regarding the standard of living will be taken.

At question time Mr. Dillon (F.G.) will ask the Minister for Local Government and Public Health whether he is aware that the failure of the Hospitals Commission to reach a decision in the matter of Sir Patrick Dun's, Mercer's and the City of Dublin Hospitals is causing grave inconvenience to the public, and whether he can say when a decision will be reached.

Mr. Dillon, in another question, will ask the Minister for Industry and Commerce whether he is aware that the British Government is revising the basis of the cost-of-living index, and whether he intends to take similar steps in Saorstat Eireann.

Mr. Archie Heron (Labour) will ask the same Minister what steps he proposes to take to implement the recommendations of the Prices Commission in regard to the sale of furniture on the hire-purchase system.

MILK PRICES

Mr. M. J. Cerry will ask the Minister for Agriculture if he has received resolutions, passed by both Cork and Dublin District Milk Boards, requesting him to amend the Milk (Regulation of Supply and Price) Act, so as to enable the Boards to fix the minimum retail price of milk to the consumer; and, if so, does he intend to introduce the amending legislation asked for.

Mr. T. J. O'Donovan and Mr. Nicholas Wall will ask the Minister for Industry and Commerce whether, in view of the increased cost of production in the dairying industry and the increased cost of feeding-stuffs, he is prepared to fix the price of butter at a figure which will enable creameries to pay at least sevenpence per gallon for milk during the forthcoming winter months.

Mr. Davin (Labour) will ask the Minister for Agriculture if he is aware that large numbers of farmers who paid more than 24s. a week to their workers, previous to the coming into operation of the Agricultural Wages Act, have now reduced wages to the minimum laid down; and what steps he intends to take to protect the workers concerned.

Mr. H. M. Dockrell (F.G.) will ask the Minister for Education if the "cut" of ten per cent. in the capitation grant to secondary schools is to be restored in the near future, and if he is aware that with the rising cost of administration some of the secondary schools are finding it impossible to carry on.

"FLYING GENERAL" AND WIFE

RESCUE OF MAROONED COUPLE

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

KHARTOUM, Tuesday.

After being marooned for over a week in a remote swamp in the Sudan, where they had made a forced landing, Brigadier-General Lewin, the lost "Flying General," and his wife reached Kongor to-day.

A landing ground has been cleared there, and it is possible for the R.A.F. aeroplane which made a forced landing there to take off. It is probable that they will be taken to Malakal by this method as the first stage of their return journey.

The couple were rescued from the swamp by a party of Dinka natives. After their fifteen-mile journey to Kongor the General and his wife arrived in fairly good condition.

The fliers were on their way from Khartoum to Malakal when they made the forced landing, and for some days there was no news of them. It is now learnt that when R.A.F. 'planes dropped food, water, medical supplies, revolvers, and mosquito nets to them their original provisions had been exhausted.

It is understood that the native rescue party was delayed during the week-end, because the route they first tried proved impassable. They had to return to Kongor and start again. There is no news yet of the Royal Air Force 'plane which has been scouting over the swamp since this morning.

General Lewin's two sons are stated to be awaiting events at Juba, in the Sudan.

BRICK THROUGH SHOP WINDOW

YOUTH DETAINED AT DERRY

FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.

DERRY, Tuesday.

The window of Messrs. M. and H. Scott, jewellers, The Diamond, Derry, was smashed to-night, and immediately afterwards a youth was seen running through the crowds along Bishop street. Two policemen gave chase, and later a youth was reported to have been taken into custody. A brick was found inside the window of the shop, but nothing had been stolen. About two years ago jewellery and other articles, valued at about £800, were stolen from this shop.

RIVAL UNIONS DISCUSS MERGER

The South Wales Miners' Federation and the Miners' Industrial Union, the rival unions in South Wales, met yesterday at Cardiff, under independent chairmanship, to discuss their future relationship.

Both sides submitted proposals for a working arrangement, but no agreement was reached, and the negotiations were adjourned until next week.

Proposals for amalgamation have emerged as a result of the close ballot recently at Taff (Merthyr) Colliery, which resulted in a majority of only five votes in favour of the men's representation at that colliery by the Industrial Union.

BOARD OF WORKS CRITICISED

COURT REQUIRES DETAILS

BURNING OF BORDER CUSTOMS HUTS

FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.

MONAGHAN, Tuesday.

WHEN a number of applications for malicious injury, brought by the Free State Minister for Finance against Monaghan County Council for the burning of Customs huts on the morning of the King's visit to Belfast, came before Judge Sheehy at Monaghan Circuit Court to-day the attitude of the Office of Public Works came in for much criticism.

Mr. Charles Lavery, County Solicitor, complained that he had been unable to obtain details regarding material and labour used in reconstructing the Customs huts. He applied to have the cases adjourned.

Mr. J. J. Keenan, State Solicitor, said that the application was reasonable. The particulars had to come from the Office of Public Works. He had endeavoured to get them, but without success. If the judge expressed what his attitude was they might be given.

Judge Sheehy—My attitude is that if reasonable particulars are not furnished it will affect my decision of the question of amounts awarded.

Mr. Keenan said that he was absolutely powerless in the matter.

Evidence was given regarding the value of stationery and uniform in the various huts destroyed.

When Bernard Joyce, Office of Works, was called to give evidence of furniture values, he said that he was instructed to give such evidence. He was to prove the value of the huts; give the value of each hut based on the cubic capacity.

State Solicitor—Can you tell why the Department had not given the details?

Witness—I gave details to my own Department.

His lordship said that the County Council had to investigate these cases and should get particulars.

The State Solicitor read three letters which he had written to the Board of Works. He had said that he did not understand whether it was laziness or otherwise, and that he would make a public protest if particulars were not furnished. He had received a letter stating that no further particulars would be given.

The Judge said that it was very hard to understand the attitude of the Board of Works. If reasonable particulars were not given he would assume everything against the Board of Works. The cases were adjourned.

The Ministry of Posts and Telegraphs obtained a decree for injury to telegraph wires on the same occasion.

OBITUARY

SIR R. P. WATSON SWIFT

The death occurred at his home at Crowborough, Sussex, yesterday of Mr. Justice Swift, one of the best known Judges of the English King's Bench. He was aged 63, and his death was the result of a seizure. The son of a barrister, he was born at St. Helens, Lancashire, in 1874; was called to the Bar in 1895, and took silk in 1912. For eight years he was Conservative M.P. for St. Helens, and acted as Recorder of Wigan before being raised to the High Court at the comparatively early age of 46. One of his last appearances on the Bench was in July of this year, when he presided over the Court of Criminal Appeal which dismissed the appeals of two men who had been convicted of murder. Among the many civil cases of prominence which Mr. Justice Swift tried was the slander action brought by Mr. R. S. Lambert, editor of the B.B.C. paper, "The Listener," against Sir Cecil Levita, the former Chairman of the L.C.C. In this action Mr. Lambert was awarded £7,500 damages. Mr. Justice Swift was always critical of the betting laws, which he once described as a "tremendous muddle," and the jury system also came under his criticism. Although he was the "father" of the King's Bench in years of service, Mr. Justice Swift was by no means the oldest Judge. He strongly held that no retiring age should be fixed for members of the High Court Bench. The greatest sorrow of his life came in April this year, when his wife died. He had no family.

SIR JOHN TIMPSON

Portsmouth lost one of her most remarkable personalities yesterday in the death, at his home at Cowplain, near Portsmouth, of Alderman Sir John Timpson, at the age of 75. The son of a dockyard man, he had himself worked in Portsmouth Dockyard, where he remained until he was 29. He was for 30 years a member of Portsmouth Borough (later City) Council, and held the position of Mayor three times. He was Chairman for the last ten years of the National Joint Industrial Council for the tramways industry. He was one of a family of ten, and started work when seven years old. Last year, at the age of 74, he drove Portsmouth's last tramcar. On that occasion he recalled that 36 years before he had driven the first tram through the Borough. He was Mayor when Brazilian and Japanese squadrons visited the port, and was twice honoured by the Emperor of Japan, who made him Commander of the Order of the Rising Sun, and Knight of the Sacred Treasure of Japan. He leaves a widow, with whom he celebrated his golden wedding five years ago and one son. In private life he was a builder and decorator.

MR. W. S. GOSSET

"E.S.B." writes in The Times:—"My friend of thirty years, William Sealy Gosset, who died suddenly from a heart attack on Saturday, at the age of 61, was known to statisticians and economists all over the world by his pseudonym 'Student,' under which he was a frequent contributor to many journals. He was one of a new school of mathematicians who were founders of theories now generally accepted for the interpretation of industrial and other statistics.

"The eldest son of Colonel Frederic Gosset, R.E., of Watlington, Oxon, he was born on June 13, 1876. He was a scholar of Winchester, where he was in the Shooting VIII., and went up to Oxford as a scholar of New College, and obtained first classes in mathematical moderations in 1897 and in natural science (chemistry) in 1899. He was one of the early pupils of the late Professor Karl Pearson, at the Galton Eugenics Laboratory, University College, London. Over thirty years ago Gosset became chief statistician to Arthur Guinness, Son and Company in Dublin, and was quite recently appointed head of their scientific staff. He was much beloved by all those with whom he worked, and by a select circle of professional and personal friends, who revered him as one of the most modest, gentle and brave of men, unconventional, yet abundantly tolerant in all his thoughts and ways. Also he loved sailing and fishing, and invented an angler's self-controlled craft, described in The Field of March 28, 1936. His widow is a sister of Miss Phillpotts, for many years Principal of Girton College, Cambridge."

STRIKE AT AIRCRAFT WORKS

Nearly 1,000 men ceased work at the De Havilland aircraft works, Stag lane, Edgware, yesterday. The men allege that an ultimatum was served on the convener of shop stewards to the effect that he would be discharged if he refused to go on night work, although he expressed his willingness to produce a medical certificate against such work. "Considerable negotiations took place," a shop steward told a reporter last night, "but in the end the firm refused to withdraw their order."

The men at Hatfield may join in the dispute.

THE WAR IN SPAIN

INSURGENTS NEAR GIJON

PRESS ASSOCIATION FOREIGN SPECIAL

ST. JEAN DE LUZ, Tuesday.

Radio Oviedo to-day announced that the Carlists are one mile only from Villadiciosv, about twenty miles east of Gijon, and that 2,000 prisoners were made yesterday alone when seventeen villages fell into insurgent hands.

As long as the present Indian summer lasts the guerilla warfare resolves itself into a battle between the bombing 'planes and the Asturian machine-gunners and dynamiters.

At Gijon the Almirante Cevera and the insurgent trawler, Velasco, yesterday bombarded and set fire to a petrol reservoir at the port of El Musel.

OFFENSIVE IN ASTURIAS

The decisive stage in the Asturias campaign appears to be approaching rapidly, says a Salamanca telegram to Spanish Press Services received by Reuter in London.

WAR IN THE AIR

"BRITISH SHIP" REPORTED SUNK

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

VALENCIA, Tuesday.

Sinking of "a British ship" by raiding warplanes on the north coast of Spain is described in an official communiqué of the Valencia Ministry of National Defence to-night.

The communiqué says: "Enemy aircraft to day intensely bombarded Gijon, where they destroyed several buildings and caused casualties, also over El Musel, sinking the British ship, Reina."

No British ship of this name is known at Lloyd's (Reuter adds). There is a Reina registered in Panama, which was last reported a month ago on a voyage from the Baltic to a destination unknown, having arrived in Havre roads on September 18.

VALENCIA CABINET MEETING

VALENCIA, Tuesday.

Important decisions will be reached, it is reported, at a council of Ministers here to-morrow.

These, it is believed, will be broadcast to the country on Thursday during scheduled speeches of Dr. Juan Negrin, the Premier, and Señor Companys, the Catalan President.

THE FRENCH PLAN

number of non-Spaniards from both sides in a proportion corresponding to the actual co-relation of non Spaniards on both sides. It will welcome any reiterated undertaking regarding the immediate discontinuance of shipments, not only of volunteers and aeroplanes, but also of military supplies of any kind.

THE CONTROL SYSTEM

"As regards the strengthening of control the Soviet Government would consider it useful only in case of resumption and reinforcement of the naval patrol along the whole Spanish coast, without which there is no reason whatever for the continuance of the system of observers on ships, and the maintenance of observation of the land frontiers only.

"The Soviet Government deems it at the same time necessary to reaffirm once more that it maintains the point of view of complete and absolute non intervention of foreign Powers in Spanish affairs, and is prepared by all means to assist in such a policy which will in the end actually bring about such non-intervention."

OFFICIAL COMMUNIQUE

After the meeting a four thousand word official communiqué was issued, more than half of which was devoted to the speech of the Portuguese representative dealing with various moves in the civil war.

PARIS SURPRISED

MAY AGREE TO A CHANGE IN PLAN

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

PARIS, Tuesday.

The Italian request that the Non-Intervention Committee should return to the original British proposal comes as a surprise in Paris.

The differences between this proposal and the one set out by M. Corbin "do not leap to the eye," Reuter was authoritatively informed, except that the French proposal is more precise as regards details.

It is unlikely, however, that the French will raise any objection if the return to the original proposal can help to expedite results.

The desire for progress is so keen in Paris that it is even within the bounds of possibility that France may agree to drop the proposal for a proportional withdrawal of volunteers in favour of that supported by the Italians for an equal number of withdrawals.

KING AND QUEEN IN YORKSHIRE

VISIT TO FACTORY WORKERS

The King and Queen, who opened their Yorkshire tour at Hull yesterday, saw many of their subjects at work in factories. They displayed keen interest in all they saw, and expressed particular admiration of girls, whose speed at work astonished them.

Though the wind was cold, the King and Queen chose an open car for a drive of about twenty miles in the streets of Hull, and they were cheered by crowds which packed the pavements eight and ten deep.

A typical homely Yorkshire welcome awaited Their Majesties at the Lord Mayor's Homes for the Aged at Hull, for the oldest inhabitant there, Mrs. Sarah Ann Hunter, invited them into her one-roomed house and chatted with them.

The Queen complimented Mrs. Hunter on the neatness of her home.

At a British Legion parade, the King stopped to talk to a V.C., Private Cunningham, and, asking about his work, was told that he was trying to run a little business of his own as a scrap iron dealer.

York, the second city that Their Majesties visited during the day, showed unbounded joy, for it was almost three hundred years since a reigning monarch had visited it. In a picturesque ceremonial, the Lord Mayor (Alderman Morris) surrendered to the King the city sword, dating from the time of Richard II.

While the King and Queen were visiting a chocolate factory the Queen suggested that efforts should be made to grow almonds—now more difficult to obtain through the war in Spain—in the British Empire. She was told that this was being tried in South Africa.

The King and Queen stayed the night at Harewood House with the Princess Royal and the Earl of Harewood. They will continue their visit to-day.

HALTER FOR WIDOW

A BILL TO CURB TESTATORS

NORTHERN PARLIAMENT DISCUSSION

FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.

BELFAST, Tuesday.

A WEALTHY testator, who did not get on well with his wife and children, left all he had "for the care of cats." Another testator left 3½d. for a halter for his widow. In the hope that she would use it without delay. Another left his widow a farthing, and directed that the money be sent to her in an unstamped envelope. Another testator left his widow his trousers, saying that she had worn them during his life and might wear them after his death. Another testator imposed conditions in the event of any of the legatees entering Parliament.

These were examples quoted in the Northern Parliament to day by Mr. T. J. Campbell, K.C. (Nationalist), when moving the second reading of a private member's measure to compel testators to make proper provision for dependents when making their wills.

The Attorney-General (Sir A. B. Babington) said that the bill contained a vicious principle, and instead of having a fixed rule of law on the subject, it was left to the courts after the death of the testator to have a roving inquiry as to the justice of his testamentary dispositions.

KNEW WIVES BEST

The husbands mentioned by Mr. Campbell in his speech, he said, no doubt knew their wives best. He regarded many of the measures in the bill as vicious.

Mr. Midgley (Labour) and Mr. W. Grant (U.) asked the Government to allow a free vote of the House on the bill.

The second reading was negatived without a division.

LORD CHARLEMONT'S RESIGNATION

REGRET IN NORTHERN SENATE

FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.

BELFAST, Tuesday.

Reference to the retirement of Lord Charlemont from the position of Minister of Education and Leader of the Senate, was made in the Northern Senate to-day.

Mr. Long, Deputy Leader, said that he would like to take the opportunity of expressing the deep regret with which he personally, and he was sure every other member, had learned of the resignation, enforced by illness, of Lord Charlemont from his position as Leader of that House, of which he had been so long so loyal a member. That House owed much to Lord Charlemont's unassuming and unfailing courtesy and tact, and to his sense of proportion, which, in the guise of humour, had so often instructed and enlivened their deliberations. He knew he voiced the feelings of every member when he wished him a speedy recovery.

Mr. McHugh (Nationalist) said that he had always found Lord Charlemont courteous and kind to everybody, and he firmly believed it would be impossible to find his equal. On behalf of the Nationalist members he conveyed to Lord Charlemont the wish that he would soon be restored to good health.

Mr. Leslie said that Lord Charlemont's geniality had made him a friend of every member of that House.

ENGLISH PRESS AND THE NORTH

ROYAL VISIT REPORTS RESENTED

FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.

BELFAST, Tuesday.

In the Northern Ireland House of Commons to-day, Mr. Henderson (Independent) asked the Minister for Home Affairs whether he had read in the English Press unfounded statements against Belfast and Northern Ireland during the Royal visit to Northern Ireland last July, and whether the Government took any action to refute those statements.

The Minister said that he regretted to say that certain unfounded statements appeared in the British Press reflecting on Northern Ireland, but the great majority of newspapers gave correct accounts of the enthusiastic reception given to Their Majesties. He understood that representations were made to the newspapers in which malicious statements appeared, expressing the deep resentment which Northern Ireland felt. Local Unionist newspapers admirably expressed in their leading articles the feelings of all loyalists in protesting against the unfounded allegations.

HITLER'S DEPUTY TO VISIT ROME

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

BERLIN, Tuesday.

Herr Rudolf Hess, Herr Hitler's deputy, has accepted an invitation from Signor Mussolini to attend the celebration in Rome on the 28th and 29th October of the fifteenth anniversary of the march on Rome.

The invitation was handed over to-day accompanied by a signed photograph of the Duce inscribed in Signor Mussolini's own handwriting: "To my comrade, Rudolf Hess, with warm friendship."

Signor Attolico, Italian Ambassador in Berlin, made the presentation.

A delegation from the Nazi Party, including Herr Lutze, chief of the Brownshirt staff, and Dr. Frank, Minister of Justice, accepted a similar invitation.

THE MARCH TO THE MANSION HOUSE

Floats, surmounted by huge, carved wooden animals and carrying beautifully dressed girls, were dragged through Dublin's streets yesterday by blue and white painted tractors.

The fact that many such a procession has passed through the city thoroughfares during the past five or six years did not detract from the colour of the spectacle, and more people than ever seemed to have time to stand and watch.

It was, of course, the pageantry which marks the bringing of the slips of paper, potentially worth thousands of pounds, to the Mansion House for the big event on Friday and Saturday.

When the procession reached the Mansion House the girls, dressed in costumes representing "Wealth," "Good Luck," "Fair Play" and "Justice," carried their precious burdens through a large pillar box at the entrance. The theme is "Hands Across the Seas," and the setting is a philatelic one: Stamps of the World, with particular attention paid to America—whence most of the entries come—decorate the walls of the Mansion House garden, and the floats which carried the counterfoils. This setting has, perhaps, more significance than that of previous Sweepstakes: the friendly intercommunication between the nations made possible by the internationally accepted use of postage stamps. Outside the Mansion House figures symbolic of countries many thousands of miles apart link arms as they receive prizes picked by nurses from an Irish cailin.

The costumes of the girl carriers were divided into four groups, each artistic in design and beautiful in colour. The first group, representing "Wealth," wore costumes of cream Irish barathea, trimmed with gold and silver braid, and cloaks of gold lamé. On their heads were Cavalier hats, trimmed with white and gold ostrich feathers. Members of the second team, representing "Good Luck," wore the same materials, with green capes, trimmed with gold horse-shoes and black velvet cats. Next was "Fair Play"—girls dressed in capes of Royal blue, trimmed with representations of Scales of Justice. They wore blue caps with gold crowns and mounts. "Justice" was represented by capes of scarlet trimmed with gold braid with the scales of justice, and forage caps with gold quills.

At the mixing the girls superintending the loading wore Cossack tunics, with trimmed gold llama and braid, Cossack caps and boots to match. The girls filling the drums wore page boy uniforms of the same Irish materials with gold and white epaulettes and caps with pretty chin straps.

The costumes were made by Messrs. Todd, Burns on their premises by their own workers, under the supervision of the fashion buyer, Mrs. L. Chadwick.

Mixing will continue in the Mansion House to-day from 10 a.m.

MUSIC IN DUBLIN

R.D.S. WINTER SESSION

Music lovers in Dublin are looking with interest to the Royal Dublin Society's winter session. At the opening recitals on Monday, November 1, they will have an opportunity of hearing Cortot, one of the greatest, and certainly one of the most pleasing, of pianists. His programme will include works by Mendelssohn, Schumann, Weber and Chopin, of which last-named composer he is perhaps the greatest living exponent. Another artist (whose recitals will be given on December 6) is Piatigorsky, whom many regard as the greatest 'cellist living.

Among soloists on the list will be found the names of Solomon and Telmanyi, also Peter Stadlen, the noted young Austrian pianist.

A special feature of the series will be the visit of the Cundell Orchestra, which is composed of nineteen players—string, wood-wind and horns. This orchestra has never before been heard in Dublin, and its members include players in many well-known string quartets. String quartets have always formed a very prominent feature of the Society's session, and this year will be no exception, as a number of the leading ensembles will be heard at Ballsbridge.

The season will conclude on February 21st with song recitals by the New English Singers, who also are making their first visit to Dublin.

COUNTY DUBLIN SEASIDE TOWNS

BATHING PLACES TO BE IMPROVED

The Dublin County Health Board yesterday deferred consideration of a report from the engineer (Mr. F. P. Russell) recommending improvements at the seaside towns of Balbriggan, Skerries, Malahide, Barnageeragh, Rush, Donabate, Corballis, and at the Velvet Strand, Portmarnock.

The report, which estimates the total cost of improvement—particularly to bathing places—at £2,160, suggests a women's bathing shelter at Balbriggan. It also suggests fifteen new concrete seats along the front, and improvements to the existing shelters and bathing places.

At Skerries the erection of three bathing shelters is suggested for the south strand; at Donabate, shelters, a boat for life-saving purposes, and public lavatories. Three public shelters are recommended for the Velvet Strand, with bathing boxes for 100 persons.

DEATH IN CAR COLLISION

Joseph Brady (15), of Firhouse, Tallaght, Co. Dublin, died in the Meath Hospital on Monday night, following injuries he received when the bicycle he was riding collided with a motor car at Milltown. It appears that Brady and a friend were cycling towards Dundrum about 7.30 p.m. when the car, which was proceeding towards the city, struck his machine and threw him on the road.

The band of the 2nd Battalion Royal Ulster Rifles from Catterick will visit B'fast at the end of the month to take part in the annual reunion of the Royal Ulster Rifles' Association. Major-General D. J. C. K. Bernard, C.B., C.M.G., D.S.O., the new Colonel of the regiment, will be present on the occasion.

GOSSIP FROM THE COURSE

MICKEY MOUSE IN FORM

Fantasy's Easy Task : Goudea Makes Amends

WOLVERHAMPTON, Tuesday Night.

FOG, the spoi sport of winter racing, at one time threatened to interfere with the final stage of the Wolverhampton meeting to-day. Shortly before the first race was due to be run visibility was restricted to about a furlong. However, although from time to time it seemed as though it would not be possible to carry through the card in its entirety, the fog did not increase in density, and the half-dozen events were run according to schedule.

Michael Beary, who is enjoying one of his best seasons, was the most successful jockey. He rode a good finish to win the second race on Star, and supplemented that success by winning the chief event on Mickey Mouse.

There was no doubting the superiority of Mickey Mouse over his rivals in the Staffordshire Handicap. It did not look as if he had beaten Mask and Wig by as much as a length and a half, but had his jockey so desired he could have won by many lengths.

A Good Performance

Michael Beary was seen to advantage on Lord Portman's gelding. He waited until near home before he brought Mickey Mouse up on the outside to get the better of Mask and Wig. It was a good performance, and now that he is back to his best Mickey Mouse will probably win more races.

Captain Hook was beaten by his 7lb. penalty. Magnetique, who was fourth, once looked a likely winner. Golden Martlet deserved his third place.

Fantasy, winner of three selling races early in the season, proved to have an easy task in the Newport Nursery Handicap. He had run well at Chepstow, where he was third to Menzala, and his starting price of 13 to 2 appeared to be generous.

As soon as the colours could be distinguished Fantasy was well in front, and this despite the fact that he was the worst drawn in the field. A hundred yards from the winning post he began to swerve towards the far rails. Fortunately, he was clear of the rest of the field at the time and did not interfere with any of his rivals.

Favourite Beaten Early

Harlequinade, the favourite, was beaten surprisingly early, for Wragg was swinging his whip some way out. He could not hold off Fresco II. filly, who passed him to gain second place.

The winner was once a 5 to 1 chance, so there was little encouragement in the market for him.

Gordon Richards always has a big following at the meetings here, because it is the nearest to his home town, and a cheer greeted Black Prince's number as it went into the frame as the winner of the Madeley Handicap.

It was one of Richards's best efforts to get Black Prince up on the post to head Steel Engraving. Nobody but the judge could be certain which had won.

Magic Island ran a disappointing race. Bene Vobis was always prominent in the closing stages, and filled third place on merit.

French Horse Wins

Goudea, a French horse imported into England by Prince Aly Khan, was a comfortable winner of the Corinthian Welter Stakes. Although the colt had had three previous unsuccessful outings, he was made a clear favourite.

It was left to Sunburn to prove Goudea's most troublesome opponent. Although he was going well as the runners came into view, he did not stay on well enough to extend the favourite fully. Royal Flush finished strongly to obtain third place.

Discord was backed like "a good thing" to beat West Highland in the Shrewsbury Selling Plate, and the result justified this optimism. The filly had taken West Highland's measure some way from home, despite the vigorous riding of Gordon Richards on the second. None of the others even showed with a chance in the last furlong. The winner was bought in for 250 guineas.

A Great Finish

Star ran a game race to win the Bushbury Selling Handicap under top weight of 9st. 7lb. The finish was reminiscent of the Cambridgeshire, and one of the best of the season.

There were eight horses almost in line as they passed the judge. Star beat Carlore by a neck, with Connemara a head away third, and Chozeh could not have been more than a short head behind the third.

CORREA'S FINE CHANCE

Ferniehurst for Chief Event at Newcastle

FOR many years Cesarewitch failures have endeavoured to recover losses in the Hwfa Williams Memorial Handicap the following week at Sandown Park. As this race now precedes the big Newmarket handicap it is only natural that it should assume some importance as a Cesarewitch trial.

A few horses holding the dual engagement have been sent to Sandown to compete in it to-day, and the race being run over a fairly stiff course of two miles should provide an excellent guide to their chances in the second leg of the autumn double.

Without doubt the most popular success would be that of the King's mare, Fairlead, who has 2lb. more to carry than at Newmarket, but 1lb. less than when she won the corresponding event last year. Though she will have the services of young Sprague, her disappointing displays this season lend little encouragement to think that she will achieve a notable double.

The promising three-year-old

represents the interests of Lord Derby, in whose colours Fairlead was successful last year when on lease. I think that she has a great chance of carrying the black and white colours to victory again.

A succession of consistent performances has made this filly a prominent factor for the Cesarewitch. She is fully entitled to consideration on her stylish victory over Euclid II. at Haydock Park alone, though, in my opinion, she gave an even better display when she ran Near Relation to half a length at Ayr on much worse terms than she will meet the present favourite at Newmarket next week.

A strong point in her favour is that she has shown her best ability on the hard going, which, unfortunately, for a great many horses, still prevails.

Rao Sahib, another promising young stayer, is, I fancy, the one that will take most beating. Walter Earl's charge produced evidence that he is a useful colt over a distance of ground when he gave nearly 1st. to Blue Train at Gatwick and practically left him standing in the last furlong. He ran another good race, without gaining a place, later in the Newbury Autumn Cup, and with 7st. 11lb. to carry to-day he certainly stands out as one of the best handicapped rivals.

I fear that Le Bambino will not stay the journey thoroughly, and Apple Peel has been absent from a course so long that he may be in need of a race.

I make particular note of

in the Atalanta Stakes. At the beginning of the season this filly promised to be one of the best of her sex when she ran second to Exhibitionnist in the One Thousand Guineas. Nothing but failure has followed, and now, claiming the full allowance, she has only 7st. 4lb. to shoulder in to-day's race. I am told that she has been showing a return to spring form in recent gallops, and in view of this I do not hesitate to give her a confident vote.

Spray's trainer, Captain Boyd-Rochfort, has a strong line to Pack Ice, who, in my opinion, is the principal danger. His charge Hydra dead-heated with Pack Ice in the Newmarket Oaks last week. On that running it appears that this mile and a quarter may be a little too sharp for Pack Ice, though she is so consistent that it would be foolish to leave her out.

Mir Zadeh, winner of the last race at Wolverhampton yesterday, will, I understand, be sent to take her chance here. She is a strongly constitutioned filly, and is sure to make another bold bid.

The issue in the Orleans Nursery may rest between Sweet Corn and Porthworth. Through their running behind Tamasha is easily the more favourably treated in the matter of weight, and I give her the preference.

Stedall's

ran so well in his recent outing at Newmarket that I am confident about his accounting for the opposition in the Hook Maiden Plate.

Likely winners of the two selling races are Straight Deal and Golden Mantle.

The principal event on the last card of the year at Newcastle to-day is the Northumberland Autumn Handicap. Taking Ferniehurst, Bectago and Incantator as a trio that may supply the winner, I select FERNIEHURST.

MALLOW PROGRAMME

GOOD SPORT PROMISED

Lucky Fool and Surya Fancied at Southern Meeting

Train—Kingsbridge, 10.40 a.m. Return, 5.40.

A PROGRAMME which should yield sport of a very interesting character will be served up for the delectation of visitors to the Mallow course, and, no doubt, substantial public patronage will be forthcoming. The management lack nothing in so far as enterprise is concerned, while the comfort and convenience of visitors is carefully studied, so that the increasing popularity of the venue is not surprising. Appropriately enough, the two best-endowed events on to-day's card, the Charleville Steeplechase and the Bandon Plate, have panned out very well as regards runners, and each will be contested by a good-class field. Lucky Fool, Rockquilla, Ahanesk and Clare County comprise a batch from which the winner of the Charleville Plate may emerge, and the vote is for Lucky Fool, who meets his Limerick conqueror, Rockquilla, on 7lb. better terms. There is also material for a good race for the Bandon Plate, which we shall leave to Surya, to whom Yellowdine may give most trouble. Selections:—

Tote Double on Third and Fifth Races.

Blarney Plate—Mountain Fox.
Buttevant Plate—Long John.
Charleville Plate—Lucky Fool.
Lee Plate—Biddy's Garter.
Bandon Plate—Surya.

NEWMARKET NOTES

How African Lily is Shaping : Sweet Corn To-day's Choice

NEWMARKET, Tuesday.

On the racecourse side of the town to-day Major Beatty subjected his Cesarewitch Stakes candidate, Idaho, in company with Irish Guard II. and Spartan III., to a rousing stripped gallop over two miles. Plantagra accompanied them the last nine furlongs. Other candidates noted in good work on this side were Walter's Muscovado, who traversed two miles and a quarter at a nice pace by himself, and H. Jellis's charge, Paladin, who was given a half-speed gallop over ten furlongs.

On the Limekilns Frank Butters sent Near Relation, with Bahuddin, seven furlongs at a striding rate. Sultan Mahomed, Euclid II., Inspiration, Huracan, Dardanelles II., Phenicien II., Stafaralla and Valedeh went seven furlongs at a nice pace. Noble King and Saaf separately were given useful pace spins over the same distance.

Captain Boyd-Rochfort gave Spray and Black Lashes a good pace gallop over one mile. Flares covered six furlongs at a nice pace with Asterion, and in a similar spin the Cesarewitch Stakes candidate, Dytchley, was accompanied by Sansalvo and Monument. Silver Spear II., Valedictory, River Prince, Unbreakable and Olympus traversed five furlongs at a useful rate.

With Toreador II. still on the easy list, African Lily is likely to be Ted Leader's sole representative in the Cesarewitch Stakes. Although Mr. Landale Wilson's five years old did not appear to have anything in hand of Slieve Mish in a good pace gallop over one mile and a half to-day with Pantagruel and Tote Investor, I should not care to say anything unfavourable about his prospects.

Arriba Espana went better than Hans Sachs and Fleet Street in a good pace gallop over six furlongs. Serena Blandish and Fascinator both proved well in a good pace gallop over five furlongs with Golden Flash. Nikitina, Paracelsus and Sparkle covered the same distance at a nice pace. Ryan Jarvis's Vol Au Vent finished in front of T. R. Leader's David Mike, Marvid and Bowsprit in a good pace gallop over seven furlongs.

We should win our fair share of the prizes at Sandown Park to-morrow. Straight Deal, who competes for the October Selling Plate, is none too genuine, and I prefer who should at least gain place honours.

Sweet Corn and Bouillabaisse are in grand trim for the Orleans Nursery. The latter has been running consistently, but I do not think will experience any difficulty in conceding the Aga Khan's filly 7lb. She missed a tempting engagement at our last fixture with this race in view, and I give her a confident vote.

Rao Sahib, Fairlead, and Correa are due to run in the Hwfa Williams Memorial Handicap. The King's representative, Fairlead, has won twice on this track, and, being in better condition than when competing for the Newbury Cup, she may be prominent. Still, I do not intend to look beyond for our best and the probable winner.

In my opinion, Pack Ice was rather unlucky not to have won the Newmarket Oaks outright last week, and I am prepared to see her once again concerned in the finish of the Atalanta Stakes. The only one of our probable starters for this event that I prefer is who has shown a return to her best form in recent gallops.

Having made good progress since running well behind First Off at our First October meeting, is fancied for the Hook Maiden Plate.

SANDGLASS (next best)

At Newcastle my fancies are:—2.15—Pressit. 2.45—Incantator. 3.15—Helen's Hill.

SPORTING GOSSIP

Closing of Entries

Entries close to-day with Mr. F. Harold Clarke, 9 Hume street, Dublin, for six well-endowed two-year-old races, to be run at Leopardstown next season. A now yearling can be entered for the series for £1 10s. Entries also close to-day for the Leopardstown Second November meeting and for the Kildangan Plate at Naas.

Slight Mishap to Tapageur

Mr. Blundell's Cesarewitch candidate, Tapageur, picked up a nail in his foot and his preparation for the big Newmarket handicap has thus been interrupted slightly. The mishap is not considered to be serious and the colt is making good progress.

More Cesarewitch Non-Acceptors

Signature, who met with a mishap a fortnight ago, has not accepted for the Cesarewitch. Other non-acceptors are Winnebar and Atout Royal.

Bookseller to Run at Newbury

Lord Astor's Bookseller is a certain starter for the Newbury Autumn Handicap on Saturday. He will be the only runner from Manton in the race. Severino will not be saddled, and Elgar is on the "easy list" and will not run again this year.

Silver Sceptre Sent to Ireland

Silver Sceptre, a four-year-old filly by Shrewd King out of Love Links, has left the Hon. G. Wellesley's training establishment at Newmarket for Ireland.

Postillion Destroyed

Postillion, a three years old gelding by Gainsborough out of Pillion, trained by Ted Leader at Newmarket, has been found unfit for further racing and has been destroyed.

Haboub Out of Training

COURSING

HEDGESIDE IMPRESSES AT LOUGHREA

BY OUR COURSING CORRESPONDENT.

When the books were opened at Loughrea yesterday on the Connaught Cup Hedgeside, last season's runner-up for the Irish Cup, was favourite at 5 to 1, and of the others Top Speed, a good puppy in his first season, who through a technicality was not eligible for the Derby at Powerstown Park in February; Just Reputation, runner-up to Model Moon here last October, and Cork Bar were all fancied at sixes. All but Cork Bar survived, and at the end of the second round Hedgeside and Just Reputation were joint favourites, with Top Speed most fancied of the other half-dozen.

If it were Clounanna over again I would be inclined to write down Hedgeside as the winner of the cup, but, although he did absolutely nothing wrong and ran each course faultlessly, going about his business in a manner that recalled his performances at Limerick, it may occur that he will come up against one that will beat him for the turn, and if that should happen he would not have time enough with the long slipping to wipe out the arrears. Possibly also he may go a bit faster in the morning, but there is one in his half of the card that will give him a run for it should they meet. She is Corofin Lass, last season a winner of a 32 trial stakes, who yesterday went a rare bat in each course and also handled her hares with plenty of determination.

Top Speed is well named. He revealed good pace against Lady Slasher and Moytura, and is the best handicapped dog left in to boot, as he got a weak hare in his second course, which he brought down at the first attempt; but I would say that he did not give a polished display the first time slipped. Model Moon, last season's winner for Mr. Moreland, is now owned by a Galway courser, Mr. J. Lydon. He had not a heavy task in either course, but, with Delight standing yards off his game, Model Moon had to do practically all the working. He and Top Speed go to slips this morning, and that course will have a very important bearing on the result of the stake. Results:—

BOXING

Neusel's Strength Enables Him to Defeat Strickland

TERRIFIC booing greeted the points' victory of Walter Neusel, the German heavy-weight, over Maurice Strickland, New Zealand champion, at Wembley Empire Pool last night. It had been a gruelling and punishing contest for the whole twelve rounds, with very little between the men. The majority of the crowd, however, had no doubt that Strickland had won, and when Mr. Jack Smith, the referee, walked over to the German's corner and held his hand aloft a storm of protest broke out.

It was only ended by a terrific ovation for Strickland when he left the ring after congratulating Neusel. But the booing broke out again directly the M.C. climbed into the ring to announce the next contest. This time the booing was intermingled with whistling and cat-calling, and the next two boxers, Ernie Roderick and Jimmy Purcell, sat in their corners waiting for it to stop. It did not, however, and eventually Roderick and Purcell began their fight amid the uproar.

Neusel, for whom defeat meant the almost certain end of his career as a leading heavy-weight, grasped his opportunity of coming back once more into the limelight, and he won purely by reason of his tremendous strength and his devastating body punching. But it was a very close thing, for Strickland gave the German heavy punishment, and more than once it seemed that the New Zealander must break down the lion-hearted German's resistance with one of his many punches to the jaw.

There was only one knock down, however, and that was in the last half minute of the fight, Strickland falling before a left followed by a right swing to the jaw, and he rested on the bottom ropes for a count of five. These two punches were the most spectacular that Neusel landed throughout the contest; but what the peopel in the cheaper parts of the arena probably did not appreciate was the shattering force of the innumerable blows which Neusel landed on Strickland's body. The New Zealander, lighter by 16lbs., showed a distaste for the club-like blows which landed on his ribs from the start.

ROUND BY ROUND DESCRIPTION

ROUND ONE.

Strickland began by swinging a left that sailed over Neusel's head, but twice in the next half-minute he clumped Neusel over the ear with a right. The German was kept defending for quite a time. He covered his chin and pinned the New Zealander's arms, but was then forced into a neutral corner. Strickland was always on the attack and swinging his right often to the German's jaw. The blows reached their objective, but Neusel rode with them and avoided their full force. Neusel came out of his shell a little to launch a body attack, and was met with an uppercut before getting in a fast two-handed to the ribs.

ROUND TWO.

Neusel came out of his corner obviously intent on proving that he was not wrongly named the "Blonde Tiger." He rushed Strickland to the ropes, and his hammer-like blows thumped on to the New Zealander's body. The fire soon died out of Neusel's effort, however, and Strickland, regaining the initiative, uppercut the German smartly and hooked to the head with both hands. Once more Neusel was stung into action, and he chased the retreating Strickland and gave him a troublesome time on the ropes. In the clinches Neusel was using his big superiority in weight advantage.

ROUND THREE.

Strickland's left prodded Neusel's face, but still the German came on in his customary lumbering style, aiming for the body and now and again using an overarm right. Strickland shrank from the heavy body blows which came at him every time Neusel attacked. The New Zealander proved that he was a master of timing, however, by again uppercutting Neusel with a right and jolting back the German's head.

ROUND FOUR.

Strickland was knocked back on his heels by a left hook on the mouth, and Neusel following up scored with a right to the body. Smack went another right on Strickland's ribs a moment later. The New Zealander obviously had no relish for these punches, but he kept at Neusel, and once more his right uppercut found its mark. He seemed unable to unsettle the German, however; for Neusel came at him and sent him back against the ropes in a corner. However, it was Strickland who struck the cleanest blows, two rights crashing on the German's jaw.

ROUND FIVE.

For the best part of a minute Strickland's left was stuck into Neusel's face, but the German, caring nothing for it, waded in to get underneath Strickland's guard and crash home more shattering punches. The next time the German attacked he was badly out of distance, over-stepped himself, and was twice clipped soundly on the jaw before he could recover. Strickland was much the better boxer, but Neusel still came boring in, trying to weaken his opponent as much as possible. Strickland, however, was showing quick footwork.

ROUND SIX.

The exchanges were becoming more at close quarters, a policy dictated solely by Neusel. Strickland covered up well in the skirmishes, and jumping out quickly, he three times found Neusel's head with a right, and later hooked the German to the jaw with a surprise left. Strickland had now surrendered the offensive, allowing the German to come in to him and then utilising his opportunities. He was very successful with this plan, jolting back the German's head time and again with right crosses, but failing to slow up Neusel to any appreciable extent.

ROUND SEVEN.

The referee stopped the bout before the round had been in progress more than ten seconds and talked to both men about holding. Neusel immediately on the resumption launched an intensive attack on Strickland's body, but was sent staggering back from the centre of the ring to a neutral corner by a right to the jaw—the first time he had been really unsettled, although he had taken innumerable punches. The stagger may have been due mostly to lack of balance, for the German was soon fighting for an inside position again, this time, however, without much success. Strickland was finding it an easy matter to reach Neusel's head, for, first with a left, and then with a right to the jaw, he brought roars of applause.

ROUND EIGHT.

Strickland still appeared fresh, and his blows bore a crispness and speed lacking in Neusel's club-like punches. A long spell of in-fighting ended with Neusel swinging a right to miss by feet, and then a left, with which he was similarly wide. Strickland was much nearer the mark when he utilised a two-handed attack, and his straight left jolted back the German's head.

ROUND NINE.

Two left hooks landed at the side of Strickland's head, but three times as many straight lefts were given in return by the New Zealander. Neusel's efforts to find a weak spot on Strickland's body were fruitless. He kept at it all the time, but suddenly he was rocked on his heels by a great right cross to the jaw, which sent him back on the ropes and had him leaning over them when the bell ended the round a few seconds later.

ROUND TEN.

Neusel showed no effects of punishment when he came up for this round, springing out of his corner and meeting Strickland before the New Zealander had made more than a yard advance. It was a gruelling battle, with the pace and the force of the blows never slackening. The referee again stopped the fight, and this time administered a caution to Neusel for holding with his right arm. Neusel then whipped Strickland severely when he pinned him on the ropes and dealt out body punishment. Strickland could not shake off the German this time, and he was pushed and knocked about the ring.

ROUND ELEVEN.

Neusel was "roughing" Strickland and giving the New Zealander little opportunity to fight from close range. A red smear appeared over Strickland's left eye. The New Zealander came out of a gruelling bout of in-fighting twice to send back Neseul's head with rights to the jaw, and he had the German retreating from more vicious jabs with both hands. There was a stream of blood coming from Strickland's left eye at the end of the round.

ROUND TWELVE.

There was a terrific spell of fighting, both men scoring from heavy punches, Strickland being the more spectacular with a left and a right which pulled up Neusel. Neusel was now using a left jab, but he was again hit on the jaw coming out of a clinch. It was in the breaks that Strickland proved his greater speed, and he fought grandly near the end of the round, scoring with rights and lefts. With only a minute to go, Neusel brought out a grand finish. A left swing landed on Strickland's jaw, and a terrific right followed it. Down went Strickland on the ropes. He had taken a count of five before he got up, and a few seconds later the bell sounded for the end of the fight.

Mr. Jack Smith, the referee, was a short while counting up his card, and then he went over to Neusel's corner and held the German's hand aloft as the winner on points.

LYDON'S QUICK VICTORY

IRISH EX-AMATEUR STARTS WELL

Dom Lydon, the young Irish heavy-weight under the management of Mr. Ted Broadribb, knocked out Tiny Woodhouse, of Croydon, in the third round at Wembley. Lydon showed much more skill, especially in footwork and he drove in many hard punches. In the second round Lydon had the Londoner down from a right swing to the jaw, but the bell came to Woodhouse's aid. Lydon landed two big punches midway through the third round, and a left hook to the chin and a right to the point terminated the contest.

CROWLEY OUTPOINTS ODWELL

Boxing skilfully and showing far more action than his rival, Dave Crowley (Clerkenwell) defeated George Odwell (Camden Town) on points in a ten rounds contest at Wembley. By his victory Crowley qualified to oppose Harry Mizler in a final eliminating contest for the right to meet Jimmy Walsh for the British light-weight title.

NOVICE HEAVY-WEIGHTS AT WEMBLEY

The third round in the £2,000 heavy-weight novices' competition was held at Wembley last night, three Irishmen—Burke, Cole and Mallon—all proving successful. Details:—

Pat Burke (Yarmouth) beat C. Baert (Newcastle), the referee stopping the contest in the third round

C. Cole (Mullingar) knocked out Ron Schneider (Wembley) in the second round.

Jack Smith (Worcester) knocked out Tommy Windsor (Peterborough) in the first round.

Johnny Bate (Worcester) knocked out Andy Lee (Rugby) in the second round.

Tommy Brown (Hackney) beat Jack Craig (Blackpool), the referee stopping the fight in the second round.

Tommy Mallon (Belfast) beat Jim Parsons (Tonypandy) on points.

Bernard Lowie (Birkenhead) beat Joe Ambrose (Airdrie) on points.

Johnny Hughes (Durham) knocked out Battling Rushe (Glasgow) in the second round.

DEPOT BATTALION'S TOURNAMENT

Last night at the Curragh, the Dépôt Battalion staged the first novice tournament of the season. Although the boxing was not of a very high standard, there was plenty of lively scrapping. Judging by the bouts, there seems to be no shortage of promising material in the dépôt. The best novice on view was Private Donnelly, who won the feather-weight. His three fights ended by the short route, two of them in the first round. Commandant Berry, O.C., presented the prizes.

CRICKET

WELL-DESERVED HONOUR

In recognition of his unique feat in scoring 3,000 runs and taking 100 wickets last season, J. H. Parks is to receive a cheque for £50 and a silver salver from the Sussex County Cricket Club. The brothers James and John Langridge, who each scored over 2,000 runs last summer, will receive mementoes value £10.

GAELIC GAMES

MATCH IN RETROSPECT

Contrast in Style Features the Replayed Final

(BY PAT'O.)

CAVAN'S welcome to her footballers was as enthusiastic as if they had won. That is the proper sporting spirit—the next best thing to winning is to accept defeat gracefully after a gallant struggle. That is the spirit that brought the Breffni men back year after year until achieving their ambitions in 1933 and 1935. With such a brilliant minor side (1937 champions) Cavan can look to the future with confidence.

In the matter of injuries Cavan suffered severely—Jim Smith was hurt early; in the second half Magee, O'Reilly (captain) and Kerrigan were forced to retire, and I have no doubt that these misfortunes stretched Kerry's winning margin.

THE MARCH PAST

On the march past Cavan looked the muscular, uniform fifteen—well marshalled and confident, with just a little too much of the gymnast type to suggest speed and resilience. Perhaps it was their Royal blue colours that suggested the illusion to me. Cavan looked like the old Dublin Garda teams who were so successful and dominant that Commissioner Broy decided to scatter them through the counties to help the Gaelic games.

Kerry looked tall and slim by comparison—long-legged, limber youths, in the main—Keohane, Myers, Healy, Dillon, Brosnan, Kinnerk—just nature's athletes, with a few small, nippy men like Tim Landers and O'Leary to weave the attacks. The dry ground and lively ball helped Kerry; Cavan's injuries helped Kerry; yet I cannot help feeling that Kerry would have won anyhow.

KERRY'S SPIRIT

Whenever Cavan's passing brought points Kerry's do-or-die spirit challenged back, and every counter-challenge won those golden goals from the feet of Landers and the hands of O'Leary. More than ever was this decisive game a contrast of styles—Kerry kept the ball in the air; Cavan wanted it on the sod. Kerry retrenched into their traditional orthodox Gaelic game of high fielding and fearless charge on demand. Cavan had recourse to neat low passing by foot and hand. Kerry's honest-to-goodness football won, and, in winning, re-opened a new edition of an old Gaelic book, where secure fielding, long, accurate kicking and skilful dribbling near goal triumphed.

This 1937 final touched a new peak of interest, and I think it only just to congratulate Mr. P. J. O'Keeffe, Central Secretary, and his Executive on their perfect arrangements. Mr. P. McDonnell, Chairman, Dublin County Board, took on the arduous duties of organising the stewards—voluntary units from his Dublin Committee. The crowds were well handled, and there was no discomfort.

STILL EXPANDING

When the new stands on the popular side are complete additional accommodation will be available for 17,000 on the terrace beneath and 4,700 seated under cover. By the time next year's finals come round it is felt that 80,000 spectators can see the games in comfort.

Now that the finals are over, the executive can concentrate on the outer fringes—on the provinces and counties where hurling and football are not flourishing. The aim of the G.A.A. pioneers was to provide native pastimes for every parish in Ireland, with the object of building up an A1 nation. Huge attendances at finals are very encouraging, but the main work calls for attention in the rank and file of the populace; in the schools, where no playgrounds exist, and in the colleges, where interest is lax. County committees must concentrate on strengthening their weak links, until the chain of parish clubs is complete from one end of the country to the other.

KEEN RATHER THAN ROUGH

I think undue stress has been laid on "roughness" in last Sunday's game. When fit men are keyed up to concert pitch in a game where robust action is essential to success, incidents are bound to occur. Razor-edged keenness spells danger, and those early spasmodic outbursts of tempers passed quickly. It was no kid-glove game, but the last forty minutes were clean as a whistle, though so severe were the charges that only perfectly trained men could stand the shocks.

The Kerry men were like whipcord. John Walsh went into one shock charge in the second half, and knew he was to be hurt. He was hurt and dazed, yet he rallied to finish the hour. Devlin's skilful dummys and perfect shots; Brosnan's soaring fielding, and the Landers' startling movements are the impressions that live on with me.

Next Sunday we revert back to the National Leagues. Mayo and Longford meet on Longford's new park, and I expect a big local attendance, keen on seeing how their 1937 junior champions will shape against the 1936 senior title holders. Other fixtures of interest are:—

At Thurles—Tipperary v. Galway (hurling).
At Mullingar—Westmeath v. Dublin (do.).
At Ennis—Clare v. Kilkenny (do.).
At Limerick—Limerick v. Waterford (do.).

BANN DRAINAGE SCHEME

TO COST £200,000 MORE THAN ESTIMATE

FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.

BELFAST, Tuesday.

In the Northern Parliament to-day the Minister of Finance (the Right Hon. J. M. Andrews), referring to the Bann drainage scheme, said that the original estimate was £643,000, but the present estimate for the completion of the work was £858,000. It was a matter of extreme difficulty, he said, to estimate the costs in connection with under-water work, even after the most careful survey of the river bed. The scheme was an undoubted success, even though still incomplete, and it had been possible to prevent the recurrent winter floods, which caused damage over a wide area.

Mr. J. W. Nixon (Ind. U.) said that they had listened to some lame excuses in that House, but he never listened to one so lame as this. On a small contract the cost was going to be £200,000 more than the estimate, and it was going to take eight years instead of five to do the work. It was expected that the harassed ratepayers would accept this extra £200,000 smilingly. If this was a sample of the way the Government conducted its business, it was not surprising that they could not get any additional industries started in Northern Ireland.

The Attorney-General (the Right Hon. Sir A. B. Babington) said that it was easier to impose penalty clauses than to enforce them. It was impossible to anticipate everything which might arise in a contract of this kind until the work was commenced. It was anticipated that the bed of the River Bann consisted of rock, and in some places boulders and clay, but a part was found consisting almost entirely of boulders, which cost as much to remove as rock.

Mr. J. Beattie (Labour) said that this was not the first occasion on which the cost of a contract had been extended.

Mr. D. H. Christie (Unionist) said that as one who lived on the shore of the River Bann he was satisfied that the Government was getting good value for the money it was spending on the scheme. Great difficulties had been met by the contractors, and he did not believe that they would make any profit out of the job.

LEASEHOLDERS MEET

"GROUND RENTS A NATIONAL QUESTION"

Mr. Eamon Ginnell, National Secretary, speaking at a meeting of the Irish Leaseholders' Association in Dundrum, Co. Dublin, last night, said: "Give the people back the land of the cities and towns, give them security of possession, and you build up a bulwark against the inroads of dangerous doctrines." The people of the country who had bought or built houses, or paid fines for possession, had, he said, obtained no relief from laws which dated from a time when the Parliament did not even represent England. The ground rent question went to the very root of things. It was a land question, and, being so, it was part of the great labour question. As such, its solution was of paramount importance to the welfare of the community. It was a national question, and it was a matter which concerned the basic unit of the community—the family. Power to evict must be taken from the absentee landlord.

Among other speakers were Messrs. T. M. Blackmore, W. J. Costelloe, B. Butler, and J. Lalor Fitzpatrick.

SLEPT IN COURT

CARRIED OUT ASLEEP

Loud snores from the public gallery disturbed the peace of Wealdstone, Middlesex, Police Court yesterday.

A solicitor was addressing the Bench in a motoring case, and the increasing volume and frequency of the snores commanded the attention of all. The sleeping man was unavailingly nudged by his neighbours, and three police officers also failed to rouse him, so they carried him out of the court and laid him in the corridor—still sleeping and snoring.

Water was poured on his face by the officers, and then the man awakened with a loud yawn, smiled, then realising what had happened apologised and left.

LONDON UNSETTLED

PRICES LOWER ALL-ROUND

Wall Street's latest attack of nerves completely overshadowed the London Stock Markets yesterday, and the confidence which marked the start of the account was replaced by renewed uncertainty. The setback in commodities further depressed sentiment, and prices quickly developed a reactionary trend, owing to the almost general disinclination to do business. Dealers lowered many of the leading issues by substantial amounts, but the declines were out of all proportion to the volume of selling in progress, and around midday bargain-hunting on a small scale caused a rallying tendency in some directions. The late dealings witnessed persistent liquidation, however, and prices drooped further to close with a dull appearance. Recently popular Industrials suffered severely, and heavy losses occurred frequently in the Mining groups.

BRITISH FUNDS.

Fairly steady conditions existed in the Gilt-edged market at the start, but quotations eased off as the session progressed because of surrounding dulness and the absence of investment demand. Old Consols came back from 74⅛ to 74, Local Loans lost ¼ to 85¼, and smaller recessions were marked by War Loan, and several others. India stocks also gave way, and the Threes closed ½ down at 78½.

FOREIGN BONDS.

Foreign Bonds were still neglected, and Brazilians, which were undermined by uncertainty regarding a new debt plan, made an especially dull showing. Political considerations continued to depress Far Easterns, though falls were less sharp than on the preceding day, and, similarly, Europeans moved lower. Germans were notably flat, and French Fours sagged to 12⅜.

RAILS.

In the market for British Rails, optimism regarding the outlook was offset by the general nervousness, and the small turnover resulted mainly from scattered sales of the junior stocks. Great Western Ord. weakened to 62½, while L.M.S. Ord. and Southern Defd. dropped ⅝ and ½, respectively. Reduced rates also ruled for Foreign Rails, among which "B.A.G.S." and Cordoba Central 1st Debs. were especially weak. American Rails were marked down all round on Wall Street news, and the same factor was responsible for a sharp fall in Canadas in the Colonial section.

INDUSTRIALS.

There was a pronounced change in conditions in the Industrial market. The recent steady inflow of buying orders ceased, and in its place dealers encountered renewed selling of a wide range of shares. From the outset, prices fluctuated adversely, and at the finish sharp losses were to be seen in the Iron and Steel, Shipping, Cement, Electrical Equipment, Trans-Atlantic and Tobacco departments. Motor shares also sustained heavy reverses, and many other issues, including Distillers, Turner and Newall, Unilevers, United Molasses and British Oxygen, also went back smartly.

MINES.

Mining shares were no exception to the general trend, and Diamond issues, which came on offer from the Continent, formed a particularly weak group. Rhodesian Coppers also lost their cheerfulness of the preceding day, and losses were general throughout the Kaffir section. Elsewhere, Zinc Corporation and other base metal issues fell heavily, while Oils became weak under the lead of Royal Dutch.

THE MONEY MARKET

FORWARD SILVER HARDER

The amount of gold sold yesterday in official dealings was £469,000, a moderately large turn-over. The price advanced to 140s. 5½d. per fine ounce—an increase of a penny on Monday's quotation. With a dollar rate at the fixing of 4.95 80 the pressure of hoarding demand forced the premium up to 2½d.

Silver was quiet, with spot unchanged at 20d. per ounce. Forward, however, improved 1/16d. to 19 15/16d per ounce.

Day-to-day Loans were in quiet demand at ½ p.c. Bill rates were unchanged at 9/16 p.c.

The acute weakness in Wall street overnight coupled with continued uneasiness in stock and commodity markets in London provided a fresh stimulus to the French Government's efforts to secure repatriation of foreign balances yesterday. Impressed by the rally which followed the Government's success in the Cantonal elections on Sunday, bear speculators in francs were simultaneously endeavouring to cut commitments in francs. Buying pressure arising from this source, combined with transfers of funds from New York and London to Paris, kept the spot francs in lively demand throughout the day. The French authorities permitted only a slight advance in the rate, however, preferring to release francs to meet the demand with a view to strengthening depleted gold reserves still further.

In the forward market discounts for all periods were sharply reduced. Despite the modest flow of French funds from New York the dollar more than held its ground against sterling yesterday. The late firmness of the dollar was shared by the bulk of the European currencies. Italian lire, in particular, were quite firm and unaffected by the capital levy announced in the course of the day.

LONDON "STREET" MARKET

Interest in the "Street" market last evening was again centred on the American section in Shorter's Court, where a very large crowd assembled following a renewed wave of selling on Wall Street. Share prices weakened further, but a steadier tone became apparent later, and during a good turnover most of the leading issues rallied sharply. The tone at the close, however, was still rather uncertain, with prices in some instances showing a reactionary tendency. Dealers remained until a late hour. U.S. Steels were offered in the early dealings at 55, but a sharp recovery occurred later to 59½, at which a net improvement of 2½ was shown on the "House" close. Nickels weakened from 41 to 40½, advanced strongly to 42½, and were eventually quoted at 42¼; while Tractions rallied from 14⅞ to 15½. Radios put on ½ to 5½. "Emmies" were 9d. better at 16s. 3d., and International Telephones closed ¼ above the worst at 5. Among Railroads, "Canadas" and New York Centrals rallied to 7⅛ and 17 respectively; while among Oils, Shell Unions had a better appearance at 16½. In the Motor group, Chryslers fell to 54, recovered sharply to 59 buyers, and finished around 58½; while General Motors closed 2½ above the lowest at 34½. Elsewhere, Anacondas recovered from 5 to 5 5/16.

THE INDUSTRIAL MARKET

The vagaries of Wall street again upset the equilibrium of the Industrial market yesterday. A further break at that centre caused dealers on this side to adopt precautionary measures, and, although there was no selling pressure, many leading home equities were marked down rather sharply.

Transatlantics were naturally the chief sufferers, and while final prices were above the worst some substantial losses were recorded at the close of business.

Other shares with an international bearing developed weakness, noticeably Unilevers.

Iron, Coal and Steel shares lost their improvement of the preceding day, while some of the leading Motors suffered a set-back, Standards being particularly weak.

The Transatlantic counters reflected the disturbed state of Wall street, and although a rally occurred on the late dealings after official hours, some heavy losses were seen on balance. U.S. Steels fell to 55 offered at one time, but recovered eventually to 59½, at which they show a net decline of 5½; Nickels lost 3¼ at 42¼, after being down to 40¼.

SHARP FALL IN STANDARDS.

"Emmies" relapsed to 15s 6d., steadying later to 16s. 3d., which left them 1s. 6d. down on the day.

Cable and Wireless stocks were also affected, noticeably the Ord., with a loss of 1⅝ at 66½.

In face of the surrounding depression Iron and Steel descriptions failed to maintain the firmer tendency which developed on Monday and at the close declines were general, although for the most part they were not heavy.

Electrical Equipments were rendered vulnerable by the advance which had taken place on Monday. Enfield Cables moved independently of the rest, recovering the loss of the preceding day and finishing at 5 3/16.

Reports of excellent business at the Motor Show and important individual contracts failed to alleviate pressure on the Motor section. Standards failed to attract support and lost 9/16 to 4 11/16. Austins slipped back to 1⅞ and Morris reacted to 36s. 3d. Fords and Rovers showed less serious falls.

TOBACCO SHARES WEAK.

A generally dull tone prevailed among the Aircrafts, but losses were less serious than in other groups.

Breweries were subject to a few scattered realisations from the provinces, but the declines recorded did not amount to much. Distillers were noticeably affected, the price falling 2s. 6d. to 103s. 6d. Guinness were maintained at 125s.

The Tobacco leaders reflected the change in sentiment. "Bats" lost 5/32 at 5¼, "Imps" ⅛ to 7 5/16, Gallahers 1/16 at 5 13/16, and T.S.T. Ord. 1/16 at 3 1/16.

The Stores group reflected the general trend. Marks and Spencer had a weak appearance with a fall of 5/32 to 2 27/32, while Woolworths reacted 1s. to 64s.

Provision and Catering shares were also subject to scattered sales. Unilevers were noticeably depressed, both the Ord. and N.V. losing 1s. 9d. at 35s. 6d. and 36s. 6d. respectively.

UNILEVERS MARKED DOWN.

Textiles failed to maintain their recent improvement. Rayon issues also had a heavy appearance. Celanese of America reflected the conditions prevailing on Wall street and gave way to 4¼, while Courtaulds slipped back to 49s. 3d.

With few exceptions Bank shares moved against holders; Midlands were quoted ex rights to the new issue.

Insurance issues generally lost ground, and Shipping shares came on offer again in the absence of buyers. In the Land section Hudson's Bays were a weak spot with a decline of 1s. 9d.

The Miscellaneous section presented a generally weak appearance, many of the leading counters losing the greater part of recent gains. British Oxygens finished 3/16 down at 4¼ and Turner and Newalls slipped back to 4 5/16.

Beechams Deferred fell 1s. to 61s. 6d., the Preferred eased to 34s.; Boots Drug, Enos and Sangers were also dull. United Molasses lost 1s. to 26s. 6d., but Ranks were firm at 19s. 9d. Elsewhere Dunlop Rubbers declined to 33s. 4½d.

SHARP DECLINE IN OILS

Following the heavy slump on Wall street on Monday, prices of Oil shares, and more particularly international counters, were marked down sharply at the start yesterday. Weakness continued throughout the day; for, although prices rallied to a slight extent from time to time, any improvement was immediately followed by a fresh decline. International counters led the decline; for, while there was not much local selling pressure, some fairly large lines came on offer from the Continent. The chief sufferers were Royal Dutch shares, which fell to the lowest point for the current year. A new low level for this year was also recorded in Shells. Although, apart from Internationals, there was no really heavy offering, prices generally were severely marked down. It was a matter of comment that while on Monday certain shares, such as Trinidad Leaseholds and Apex (Trinidad), met with influential support when the market took a turn for the better, these shares were friendless on yesterday's fall.

RUBBERS WEAK

Any cheerfulness which may have existed in the Rubber share market yesterday was effectively dispelled early in the session by the general uncertainty and the unfavourable behaviour of the commodity. Support for the shares was withdrawn completely, and dealers encountered a rather substantial volume of liquidation, part of which was on Continental account. Reduced rates were quickly quoted for the principal issues, but selling persisted throughout the day, and in the late dealings the downward movement was severe. Anglo-Dutch, Rubber Trust, Telogo and Kuala Lumpur finished with losses ranging from 1s. 6d. to 2s., while several others dropped about 1s. Fears of selling were responsible for a weak tone in the commodity section, and spot rubber sold down to 7⅜d. per lb.

WOOL

BRISBANE.—The market was fully firm at Monday's wool sale at Brisbane. The Continent took most wool, though there was good general bidding from all sections of buyers. There was a total catalogue of 14,176 bales.

MELBOURNE.—Competition was satisfactory at Melbourne on Monday, and quite a good clearance was effected of the 10,200 bales put up for auction. Prices ruled on a par with those obtained at previous sale. The Continent was the principal operator, but good support came from Yorkshire and Japan.

LONDON MINING MARKET

AN ALL-ROUND DECLINE

Markets generally yesterday were adversely affected by the overnight slump in Wall street. Even in the Mining Markets, which are only remotely associated with that centre, a certain amount of nervousness was observable, due largely to fears of further realisations to meet Yankee losses.

The Kaffir section, however, refused to be comforted and, although there was no pronounced offering in progress, prices fell away in all directions, and in most cases there was no recovery. Paris was inclined to offer its specialities and thus Central Mining were no less than 25s. on the wrong side, while Gold Fields, Rand Mines, "Johnnies," and many of the dividend-payers registered substantial shrinkages. The developing concerns were also weak under the lead of West Wits, which were finally 1/16 on the wrong side.

Rhodesians were not only affected by the surrounding depression, but also had to face a further heavy decline in the price of Copper to the lowest level of the year. A little offering by nervous holders coming on an unresponsive market not only caused an all-round drop in prices, but also induced some bear selling.

Tins provided perhaps the most depressed spot in the whole market. It was not that there was any great amount of real selling—realisations on anything like a large scale were impracticable—but prices were marked down almost indiscriminately and hardly a share in the active list escaped. Closing prices:—

Bank and Insurance Shares Year Book

Accounts of more than ninety British banks and discount and insurance companies have been analysed for the 1937-'38 edition of the "Bank and Insurance Shares Year Book" (10s. 6d.), compiled and published by the Trust of Insurance Shares, 30 Cornhill, London, E.C.3. The volume of more than 700 pages contains a complete record of share prices, dividends and investment yields from 1916 to 1936. Other information includes a directory of directors in these particular groups, information of amalgamations and absorptions, and details of the trust unit system for investment purposes. Special articles deal with the structure of the British system of banking, and the attractions of insurance shares. Mr A. C. Thorne, F.I.A., Manager of Equity and Law Life Assurance Society, has contributed an informative review of insurance share yields over fifteen years. Tracing the return of an investment of £2,800 spread equally over 28 representative companies, he shows that the net income yielded during 1921-1926 amounted to £760, or an average of £152 per annum. The corresponding income during 1926-'31 amounted to £990, or an average of £198, and for 1931-'36 it was £1,111, averaging £222. The market value of the investment in 1921 of £2,800 would have increased after five years to £4,834, after ten years to £5,958, and after fifteen years to £10,694.

Leyland Motors' Big Contract

Dunlop Perdriau Profits Up

The Dunlop Perdriau Co. of Australia, in which the Dunlop Rubber Co., Ltd., has a substantial interest, earned £409,700 in the year to June 30 last. The dividend is being raised from 5 per cent. to 7 per cent. The profit figure is £104,000 above the 1935-'36, and is the best since 1928-'29, when the profit was £411,600.

Cable and Wireless, Ltd.

The traffic index figure for the month of September is 72.6, which compares with 73.0 for the preceding month, and with 70.7 for the month of September last year.

Poland's Steel Quota Raised

Austria and Hungary have, after years of abstention, joined the International Iron and Steel Cartel. This is one of the results of the meeting of the cartel in Warsaw. The conference, attended by representatives of 12 countries, including Great Britain, France and U.S.A., was held in camera. It is, however, known that one of the subjects dealt with at great length was the problem of prices and that of "keeping a firmer control on international markets." Another subject dealt with was the participation of Poland in the International Cartel and her demand for a greater export quota. Poland's participation in the Cartel is becoming very unpopular in Warsaw, and some official circles are beginning to doubt the benefit of her continuing membership. As a result of the meeting, however, Poland is to be allowed a far larger export quota next year and better export conditions and markets.

A White Paper issued by the Northern Ireland Government yesterday showed that the Ulster Loan Stock 4½ per Cent, outstanding at 31st March, 1937, was £3,708,404, and the 5 per Cent. The assets included:—Local Loans, £2,855,238; grants under Housing Acts, £1,926,973; expenses of Bann drainage, £260,547.

AMERICAN FINANCIAL NOTES

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

HALF-A-MILLION BALES OF COTTON PLEDGED.

A Dow Jones message from Washington states that over 574,000 bales of cotton have so far been pledged under the loan programme, according to the Commodity Credit Corporation. At the same time it is pointed out that the volume may be considerably more in view of reports of the movement being delayed. According to one official all indications point to an unusually heavy participation in the 9-cents Loan.

LOWER PRICE FOR SCRAP COPPER.

The price of scrap Copper has been reduced by 1 cent per lb. as a result of the weakness in London. It is believed that Customs smelters will shortly be forced to reduce further the domestic copper price. At the same time it is regarded as only a matter of time until producers must revise their price, which at present is still 13 cents per lb. Copper scrap is now quoted at 8¾ cents, which is the equivalent of the refined basis of 10½ cents per lb.

The price of No. 1 heavy melting steel scrap at Pittsburg was reduced yesterday by $1.00 per ton, with the quotation now ranging from $16.00 to $16.50 per ton.

THE AMERICAN MARKETS

RENEWED SLUMP ON WALL STREET

RECOVERY TOWARDS THE CLOSE

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

NEW YORK, Tuesday.

The most excited operations on Wall Street since the débâcle of 1929 took place to-day, the turnover reaching 7,290,000 shares. After dropping precipitately—the falls in some cases touched $13—under the most feverish selling for more than four years, which put the floor of the Exchange into a state of demoralisation unparalleled since 1929, the market rallied spectacularly and substantially on a wave of good buying, a proportion of which was from abroad.

The final list displayed a very up-and-down appearance, with the gains touching $7, and losses extending to $5. The early relapse followed distress and "scared" selling, the season being attributed largely to defeatist psychology engendered by the recent steep decline. Meanwhile, however, it was pointed out that many securities had obviously sunk to levels too low in relation to the quick assets, if not in regard to their future earnings expectations.

The opening was weak, with business extremely active. Big blocks of shares changed hands almost immediately at considerably lower prices. Later in the morning the market plunged further in highly nervous operations, with the "ticker" falling behind, and subsequently trading became extremely feverish. Towards mid-day quotations had slumped anything to $10, and blocks extending to as much as 25,000 shares were being dealt in. The "ticker" at this juncture was nearly twenty minutes late.

Thereafter the decline was halted now and then, with sentiment becoming very undecided and one-point changes occurring between sales as the unloading of impaired margin accounts proceeded. Business continued in erratic fashion in the early afternoon. Rallies of 1 to 2 points now developed, with some buying from London reported. The "ticker" at this point was more than twenty minutes behind transactions. Indecision was still very apparent, but the liquidation had apparently been stopped—at least for the time being.

Later, the trend for the most part turned slightly upward, the "ticker" overtaking transactions, as heavy buying, including purchasing by investment trusts, stemmed the decline. Though the list now was mainly fractions to 5 down, the pivotal Steels, Coppers, Oils, Utilities and Merchandisings indicated rallies ranging to 3 points.

The buying movement continued in the later dealings, with the Oil group and a number of the Steels, Minings and Utilities most prominent in the recovery. The close was decidedly irregular.

Sterling exchange opened 1/16 down at 4.95¾, and declined to 4.95⅝ during the morning. The rate remained at this level in the afternoon, but finally declined, and closed ¾ lower—compared with the previous close—at 4.95 1/16.

Silver was unchanged at 44¾c.

ABYSSINIAN WAR AFTERMATH

THE DUCE ORDERS CAPITAL LEVY

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

ROME, Tuesday.

Meeting under Mussolini's chairmanship to-day, the Italian Cabinet decided to impose a 10 per cent. levy on the capital and reserves of joint stock companies.

The levy is one of several new imposts laid on industry to meet the cost of the Abyssinian war and the rearmament programme, "imposed on Italy by the arms programmes of the other world Powers."

Banks and other credit institutions are exempted from the tax on the ground that they have already contributed to other special taxes.

Co-operative societies are exempted if their capital is not more than 20,000 lire.

In certain cases the tax can be paid by yielding up part of the shares to the State thus increasing the already considerable interest which the Fascist Government has in Italian industry.

It is explained that the new tax is in the interests of fiscal justice, for holders of real property already have been made to contribute towards the Abyssinian war and rearmament by a special tax and a forced loan.

Investors have paid through a 3½ per cent. Conversion Loan. Other imposts will include one on business transactions. To encourage the entry of foreign capital into Italy the Cabinet have decided to offer foreign investors many exemptions from taxation.

These will include exemption from death duties on money transferred to Italy within the next twenty years.

It is announced that the 10 per cent. impost on share capital will only be levied once.

Signor Virginio Gayda, in the Giornale d'Italia, says that the new taxes will make it possible to balance the Budget for the current year.

The revenue in the first quarter of the current year (on September 30) shows an increase of 300 million lire over the estimates. But there was still an estimated deficit of 3½ milliards of lire. One milliard of this deficit will be made good by the yield of supplementary taxes decided to-day, not including the 10 per cent. on share capital.

The remainder will be made good by the yield of the forced loan on real property, which will produce a similar amount also next year.

Signor Gayda does not attempt to estimate the yield of tax on share capital

It is unofficially estimated that the levy will yield between £50,000,000 and £60,000,000.

LINEN INDUSTRY

NORTHERN IRELAND'S POSITION

Speaking at the opening of a linen publicity campaign in Birmingham yesterday, Mr. Milne Barbour, Northern Ireland Minister of Commerce, said that the Government of Northern Ireland had recently passed legislation which affords very substantial attractions to anyone contemplating the starting of a new industry or a new branch, by offering grants and loans to an extent which would free an eligible undertaking from the burden of rent, rates, or the initial cost of purchased premises for the first five years of its existence. "Where these advantages do not suit the purpose, we have our Loans Guarantee Act, whereby the Government is able to guarantee loans raised for the purpose of capital expenditure, thus enabling the industrialist to raise the necessary finance on the most advantageous terms. These are advantages which the Government has created, but an even greater advantage lies ready to hand in the dexterity of our operatives in Northern Ireland, which, in our linen goods, and even in the heavier industries such as shipbuilding, has enabled us to give products of skill and workmanship of the highest possible standard. There is no shortage of labour at present in Northern Ireland, as there is in some centres in Great Britain. On the contrary, we have a reservoir of skilled labour from which the requirements of any new industrialist could be satisfied."

CHILDREN RAISE ALARM

WOMAN FOUND DEAD

Two children screaming. "Come quick," led to the discovery by a passing cyclist yesterday of the body of Mrs. Alice Maud Morries, of Congleton, Cheshire, lying in a pool of blood on the floor of a front room at the Old Tollgate House, a lonely spot on the main road between Burton-on-Trent and Lichfield.

A man was taken by car to Lichfield Police Station and questioned.

Mrs. Morries came to stay at the house a few days ago. She was fully dressed when she was found, and her head was badly crushed. The cyclist entered the house just as a man was leaving. When he discovered the body he rushed from the cottage and stopped a motorist, who went for the Lichfield police.

Mrs. Morries was 33, and the children who gave the alarm were her daughters, Joan, aged 12, and Pearl, aged 8. A table had been set for a meal and there was every appearance that the children had had their meal preparatory to going to school.

WORST U.S. AIR CRASH

DEATH OF NINETEEN CONFIRMED

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

SALT LAKE CITY, Tuesday.

A search party which to-day reached the burnt-out wreckage of the luxurious "main-liner" aeroplane on a snow-covered peak on the Utah-Wyoming border confirmed that all sixteen passengers and crew of three were dead.

The crash is thus established as the worst in the history of American civil aviation.

An official of the United States Air Lines, owners of the 'plane, stated that the searchers "peered into the wreckage and found no signs of life."

According to a newspaper representative, the wreckage of the machine was scattered over an area seventy yards square. Bodies were strewn on all sides, only limbs protruding from the deep snow.

"The forward portion of the 'plane was a nightmare of twisted, blackened metal," he adds. "It must have crashed and burned with a terrific explosion and flare of petrol. . . . The pilot may have realised that disaster was upon him a moment before oblivion; for the air liner had nosed slightly upward. It had sheered off ten large pine trees as though they were matchwood."

Among the dead were Dr. Louis Gross, a distinguished Canadian-born heart specialist, of New York City; two newsreel cameramen, and a young stewardess.

Miss Ruth Hallinan, Glandalane, Fermoy, a member of the Cork Aero Club, had a narrow escape from serious injury this evening while flying her 'plane over the aerodrome. When about 300 feet up she had engine trouble, and was endeavouring to make a forced landing when she crashed against the wire fence surrounding the aerodrome.

Miss Hallinan escaped injury but her 'plane was badly damaged. The under carriage, propeller and wings were broken.

CARD-PLAYING ON TOMBSTONES

STATEMENTS AT BELFAST INQUIRY

"It has now become so desecrated, so much used as a playground for children, as a resort for idle persons who have nothing to do but sit and smoke and indeed, horrible as it may sound, play cards on the gravestones, that it has been found necessary to make this application."

This was the opening statement made by counsel for the Representative Church Body at a public inquiry held in Belfast City Hall yesterday regarding representations made under the Public Health (Ireland) Act for the discontinuance of burials at Shankill Graveyard, Belfast.

"It is difficult not to shudder," went on counsel, "when one thinks of those departed ones lying in such surroundings."

FOUR PEOPLE GASSED

CELLAR LIKE LETHAL CHAMBER

The bravery of a police officer in twice descending into a cellar "so filled with gas as to be like a lethal chamber" was praised by the Assistant Coroner for North Worcestershire, Mr. F. C. Playne, at the inquest at Kidderminster yesterday on the four victims of the gassing accident which occurred early on Sunday morning in Sutton road, Kidderminster.

The victims were:—Leonard Walters (26), his wife (24), their daughter (5), and the woman's mother.

William James Ayres, a relative of the victims, said that there was a great deal of vibration from traffic in Sutton road, and that it shook the houses.

A meter inspector employed by the Kidderminster Gas Company said that on September 14 the meter was in proper order. The vibration of heavy vehicles would shake the meter board and might cause the board to slip.

The Assistant Coroner said that he believed the police theory was the only feasible one, that either the vibrations caused by passing traffic, or the action of putting pennies in the meter, or the combination of both, had gradually moved the meter out of its position on the board, which was loose on the spikes. The Gas Company was responsible for seeing the meters were properly fixed, and, perhaps, the company felt wiser after the event, although they could not anticipate that the vibration caused by the lorries would affect the meters to such an extent.

The jury returned a verdict of death by misadventure.

DEATH SENTENCE ON YOUNG BARMAN

John Thomas Rodgers, a 22 years old barman, was, at the Old Bailey yesterday, sentenced to death for the murder at Northwood, Middlesex, of Mrs. Lilian Maud Chamberlain, a 25 years old barmaid, who had worked with him at the Northwood Hotel. The prosecution alleged that he strangled the woman with a tape, after hitting her on the head with an iron implement.

The jury, on which there were two women, were absent for over two hours, and then found Rodgers guilty, with a recommendation to mercy on account of his youth.

WIDOW RESCUED FROM PYRE

"TIMES" TELEGRAM.

DELHI, Tuesday.

The 20-year-old widow of an Indian police constable was dragged from her husband's funeral pyre by Mr. Leonard Owen, magistrate and collector at Cawnpore, and Mr. G. A. Pearce, superintendent of police, when she attempted to immolate herself in a paroxysm of grief yesterday at the village of Tatia, six miles from Cawnpore. Learning of her intention, the two officials reached the spot in the nick of time.

AEROPLANE ON A BEACH

CASE AGAINST "FLYING PARSON" DISMISSED

A charge against the Rev. Cecil Dudley Claire Boulton, of Emperor's Gate, London, Chaplain to the Flying Mission, and known as the "Flying Parson," of flying an aircraft in such a manner as to be the cause of unnecessary danger to persons using the foreshore at Weston-Super-Mare on August Bank Holiday, was dismissed by the Weston-Super-Mare magistrates yesterday.

He landed on the beach, and conducted a Service there from his 'plane to a large number of holiday-makers.

Mr. Boulton, giving evidence, said that before leaving Bridgwater he calculated that he had five gallons of petrol in the tank, but when near Weston the engine commenced misfiring, and as he thought he might have made a miscalculation he decided to investigate. He looked round for a suitable landing-place, and saw that he would have to go over houses to reach Weston airport, so decided that the safest thing was to land on the beach, which he did without harm to anyone. He saw no one running helter-skelter as he landed.

The reason he held the Service on the sands was because he was asked by the holiday-makers to do so, but he denied that he went to Weston expressly for that purpose. He went to have mended a gauge which was not registering correctly, and it was from this gauge that petrol had leaked and caused the shortage.

He agreed that he returned to Bridgwater without having the gauge mended, but he wedged it with some cotton waste.

After a five hours' hearing the bench dismissed the case.

GLASGOW COLLISION

'BUS WITH THIRTY BLIND PASSENGERS

Crashing into the side of a Glasgow Corporation 'bus carrying 30 blind passengers a packed tramcar, coming from Keppochill road, left the rails just after crossing the intersection of Possil road and Saracen street, and came to rest against the wall of a public-house.

None of the passengers was seriously injured, though three were taken to the Royal Infirmary.

They were: Miss Mary Anne Emerson (blind), shock; Miss C. Henry (blind), abrasions; and Mrs. McCallum, shock. After treatment they were not detained.

The tram was hauled back to the rails and was towed from the scene shortly after the accident. Within an hour, traffic was operating normally.

LADY MASSEREENE AND THE ARMY

EVERY ABLE-BODIED MAN SHOULD BE IN IT

"I can't understand the mentality of any young man who does not join the Army. It is perfectly monstrous that people who have the advantage of being citizens of the greatest country in the world, and take all its advantages, should do nothing to help."

Those words, spoken by Viscountess Massereene, were heartily applauded by a packed meeting of women Unionists in the Maryhill division of Glasgow.

The Viscountess urged the women to persuade their husbands, brothers and sons to join the Army.

"I am not an isolationist, and I don't think men in this country should be asked to lay down their lives for a quarrel which is no concern of ours, but I do think, nevertheless, that every able-bodied young man in this country ought to join the Regular or the Territorial Army, so as to be in a position to help to defend our country to the last ditch."

It was with great surprise, she added, that she learned that the strength of the British Army—including the forces in India—was actually less than the number of workers employed by the L.M.S. Railway.

"In my own home in the Island of Mull every single young man has joined the Territorials. My husband and son are both in the Army, and I feel I am in a position to say to all of you that you must persuade your husbands, brothers and sons to join the Territorial or Regular Army."

It was very important, added Viscountess Massereene, that we should have a strong Army, because unless we had a strong Army behind us we could not dictate our policy to Europe.

"Force does talk even in the twentieth century," she declared.

DUKE DINES WITH HIS COUSIN

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

NUREMBERG, Tuesday.

The Duke and Duchess of Windsor arrived here to-night from Dresden, having come via Bayreuth, over one of the new motor-roads, through some of the most picturesque parts of Germany. They did no sight-seeing to-night, but rested in their hotel, the Deutschehof, where Hitler stays when in Nuremberg.

They were entertained to dinner by the Duke's cousin, the Duke of Coburg, a grandson of Queen Victoria.

FRANCE'S WARPLANE PRODUCTION

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

PARIS, Tuesday.

Important plans for a reorganisation of French military aircraft production are contained in an official communiqué issued to-night by the Air Ministry. The communiqué states:—

"There is no longer a separation between the technical services and the research and construction service. A new service, that of aeronautical production, is to be created.

"It will deal with general questions arising from the nationalisation of the aeronautical industries. It will co-ordinate their activity and prepare for industrial mobilisation.

"Directly dependent on the Minister, the new service will provide for essential needs for which there had not previously been a special service."

The British Home Secretary has appointed a committee "to inquire into the use of celluloid and any similar highly inflammable material in the manufacture of toys and the like, and to consider what steps are practicable against the danger arising to the public and especially to children from such use."

POULTRY, FISH, CAGE BIRDS, DAIRY.

TURKEYS HAVE ARRIVED.

Writing on this subject in the Weekly Irish Times, the Poultry Correspondent says:—The season appears to have opened early with a boom, for turkey poults, of course, are a distinct novelty and find ready sale. Realising this, there would appear to be wisdom in the dictum of getting rid of the best first. Why wait until the middle or, indeed, end of the season, and keep the whole flock waiting for the backward birds to be fit? They will get a far better chance of improving quickly if the forward birds are sold off as they attain the required standard. Anyhow, one has to think of other factors. There is, for instance, the savings in the extra food that would be consumed were the advanced birds to be kept on until the others were ready. Numbers of people, of course, like to have the handling of a good lump sum of turkey money around Christmas. A better business person would probably choose a regular output of a small number of birds, weekly or fortnightly, as the more profitable method of disposal.

CLEMATIS JACKMANNI.

Writing on this subject in the Weekly Irish Times, the Garden Correspondent says:—Very few flowers, indeed, have given such a good account of themselves during the autumn, now all too soon passing away, as this favourite climbing plant, and none, we are certain, could equal its gorgeous sheet of rich purple bloom wherever it found a home. Grown over a trellis, an arch or pergola, or covering a wall, its wealth of long-lasting flowers has rendered it one of the most attractive objects in numbers of villa gardens in suburban districts, regardless of weather conditions. It will grow in practically any soil or aspect.
